Mannucci, 2012-12-06 With great pleasure I welcome you to the City of Groningen In more than one way there is cause for celebration Today marks the third lustrum of the annual international symposium on blood transfusion organized by the Rode Kruis Bloedbank Groningen Drenthe In my opinion it has been a remarkable initiative of the Bloedbank to start organizing a scientific conference as it did in 1976 It meant among others that in case of success the initiative would grow to be an annual item on the international congress calendar It also meant that a possible third lustrum would coincide with the celebration of the 950th anniversary of the City of Groningen I am happy to note that the initiative has been successful over the past fourteen years the Rode Kruis Bloedbank Groningen Drenthe has succeeded in organizing an annual symposium on blood transfusion with a different theme each year and with an average attendance of 250 participants from some 26 countries world wide The platform created with the special formula of the symposium for science and industry has been well balanced and beneficial to both Mr Chairman ladies and gentlemen I like to compliment the organizers with the success that they have attained Allow me to mention the name of just one person in whom I like to thank everyone who has been involved in creating the annual Bloedbank symposia my warm congratulations to Dr Smit Sibinga and his staff

Clinical Benefits of Leukodepleted Blood Products Joseph Sweeney, 2013-06-29 Joseph Sweeney Andrew Heaton the presence of allogeneic leukocytes in blood products received little attention until the mid 1950s when these passenger cells were implicated in the etiology of febrile transfusion reactions and early strategies based on centrifugation were developed to effect their removal In recent decades and particularly in the past five years there has been an accumulation of literature implicating leukocytes in a wide variety of undesirable reactions to blood transfusion

White cells are the least numerous of the cellular elements in blood and ratios of white cells to platelets and white cells to red cells are approximately 1:15 to 1:1000 respectively. This ratio is maintained in whole blood but may be altered slightly in the process of component preparation. Any production or processing step which intentionally decreases this ratio will result in a product which can be described as white cell depleted. It has however become more common to define the outcome as a residual white cell content rather than a decrease in cellular ratios although the latter makes more sense on theoretical grounds since depletion of white cells needs to be put in the context of any unintentional loss of red cells or platelets. The end result of this intentional processing step therefore is generally expressed as the residual absolute number of white cells or as the degree of difference in white cell content the latter expressed as either a percentage change or as a logarithmic reduction.

Autologous Stem Cell Transplantation Angelo Carella, 2020-08-26 This textbook integrates basic research and clinical aspects underlying the most recent results in those malignant diseases where progress is most effective. Recent evidence shows that higher doses are better in inducing higher cure rates in hematological neoplasias although myeloblation related to dose intensity can be a limiting factor. The toxicity can now be controlled with autologous marrow and peripheral blood progenitor cell transplantation used with or without growth factors. The combination of high dose chemoradiotherapy followed by re-infusion of autologous stem cells constitute a dramatic advance in the treatment of refractory and relapse hematological neoplasias.
