registered population in general practice This model of a registered practice population has withstood multiple reconfigurations and reorganisations within the NHS and is the envy of many countries trying to create a public health system with primary care at its heart There are clear differences in approach with the inevitable conflicts between the rights of the individual set against the responsibility to ensure services are delivered fairly and equitably to whole populations This book explores this dilemma showing how people working in primary care can cross the divide to become part of the public health system and in doing so are well placed to make a difference to the health of their populations

Written for family doctors looking to strengthen local collaboration, it brings together the traditional strengths of consultations, caring, continuity, coordination and coverage with the current and future challenges of building capacity, community, creativity, consistency, collegiality and campaigning It highlights the critical importance of working with patients, maximising the use of serial encounters, integrating care, joint working between practices, social prescribing, community development and advocacy based on patient and practitioner experience Drawing on the highly regarded work of Deep End GPs serving the poorest communities in Scotland (www.gla.ac.uk/deepend), the book is an invaluable handbook for all primary care doctors, irrespective of health care system or country, seeking to provide unconditional continuity of personalised care for all patients whatever problem or combination of problems a patient may have

Person-centred Primary Care Christopher Dowrick, 2017-11-27 Primary care grounded in the provision of continuous comprehensive person centred care is of paramount importance in the delivery of accessible and effective health care around the world The central notion of person centred care however relies on often unexamined concepts of self or understandings of what it means to be a person and an agent This cutting edge book explores contemporary pressures on the sense of self for both patient and health professional within a consultation and argues that building new concepts of the self is essential if we are to reinvigorate the central tenets of person centred primary care Contemporary trends such as shared decision making between health professionals and patients and promoting self management assume those involved are able to make their own decisions and take action In practice however medicine often opts for reductionist perspectives of patients as passive mechanical systems and diseases as puzzles At the same time huge political and organisational changes mean time and resources are scarce putting further pressure on consultations This book discusses how we can start to resolve these tensions The first part considers problems posed by the increasing bureaucratisation of primary care the impact of information technology in the consultation the effects of chronic disease on our sense of self and how an emphasis on biology over biography leads to over diagnosis The second part proposes solutions based on a strong ontology of consciousness concepts of creative capacity coherence and engagement and will show how these can enhance the self esteem of patients and doctors and benefit their therapeutic dialogue Combining theoretical perspectives from philosophy sociology and healthcare research with insights drawn from clinical practice this edited volume is suitable for those researching and studying primary healthcare communication and relationships in healthcare and the medical humanities
