Tales of Tropical Plant Diseases in an Age of Climate Change Khoon Chin,2025-05-24 This book offers a global perspective on major tropical crops exploring their role in food production and the threats plant diseases pose to their productivity Drawing from the author s diverse experiences as a plant pathologist across Asia Europe the US and Latin America as well as his work as an independent research consultant on complexity science the book offers both professional insights and personal reflections Narratives have long been a powerful tool for human communication often more knowledge dense than any other form of exchange The use of stories in this book serves three main purposes First complexity theory suggests that reflecting on others stories can inspire scientists to form fresh perspectives and unique insights based on their own knowledge and experiences This process may even help people know what they didn t know they knew a concept popular in knowledge management circles Complexity practice takes this further by helping scientists uncover what they didn t know they didn t know a crucial element for advancing research rather than simply investigation Second today s students often report learning more from the personal experiences of their teachers than from mere facts Traditional encyclopedic texts leave little room for the self learning practices that are central to modern education Stories by contrast are an effective way of conveying experiential or tacit knowledge which is often more valuable in real world contexts Additionally the use of narratives and visuals makes phytopathology more accessible for broader audience interested in sustainability biodiversity food security biosecurity regenerative agriculture resilience climate change new technologies and public policy The final chapter ties the book together by focusing on sustainability and ecosystem services for the future It also provides an extensively researched library of references on the management of tropical crop diseases offering quick access to essential facts in the appendices

Simply put, all musicology and any writing about music is an attempt at making analogies between what happens within the world of sound and language itself. This study considers this analogy from the opposite perspective: authors attempting to structure words using musical forms and techniques. It's a viewpoint much more rarely explored, and none of the extant studies of novelists' musical techniques have been done by musicians. Can a novel follow the form of a symphony and still succeed as a novel? Can musical counterpoint be mimicked by words on a page? Alan Shockley begins looking for answers by examining music's appeal for novelists and then explores two brief works: a prose fugue by Douglas Hofstadter and a short story by Anthony Burgess modeled after a Mozart symphony. Analyses of three large emblematic attempts at musical writing follow: The much-debated Sirens episode of James Joyce's Ulysses, which the author famously likened to a fugue; Burgess' largely ignored Napoleon Symphony: A Novel in Four Movements, patterned on Beethoven's Eroica; and Joyce's Finnegans Wake, which Shockley examines as an attempt at composing a fully musicalized language. After these three larger analyses, Shockley discusses two quite recent brief novels: William Gaddis' novella Agap Gape and David Markson's This is not a novel, proposing that each of these confounding texts coheres elegantly when viewed as a musically structured work. From the perspective of a composer, Shockley offers the reader fresh tools for approaching these dense and often daunting texts.

The Darjeeling Distinction Sarah Besky, 2013-11-23 Nestled in the Himalayan foothills of Northeast India, Darjeeling is synonymous with some of the finest and most expensive tea in the world. It is also home to a violent movement for regional autonomy that, like the tea industry, dates back to the days of colonial rule. In this nuanced ethnography, Sarah Besky narrates the lives of tea workers in Darjeeling. She explores how notions of fairness, value, and justice shifted with the rise of fair trade practices and postcolonial separatist politics in the region. This is the first book to explore how fair trade operates in the context of large-scale plantations. Readers in a variety of disciplines—anthropology, sociology, geography, environmental studies, and food studies—will gain a critical perspective on how plantation life is changing as Darjeeling struggles to reinvent its signature commodity for twenty-first-century consumers. The Darjeeling Distinction challenges fair trade policy and practice, exposing how trade initiatives often fail to consider the larger environmental, historical, and sociopolitical forces that shape the lives of the people they intended to support.
