A. Brebbia,D. Kaliampakos,2008 It is a strongly held belief that population growth and the demand for better accommodation and leisure facilities combined with a desire to improve the landscape will result in the need to develop more underground spaces This phenomenon which started in countries subjected to extreme climates is now becoming more widespread Underground spaces are being utilized for a wide diversity of needs They range from classical excavations to subway constructions underground sports halls power stations waste repositories underground cities and many others Their construction techniques are also varied from open air excavations to newly developed injection methods The response of the underground structures on the imposed loadings depends on a number of parameters that sometimes are too complex or not fully understood resulting in budget overruns or even failures that lead to loss of property or life Such uncertain cases need to be addressed and engineers should be able to accurately predict the construction s performance throughout its construction and service life The First International Conference on Underground Spaces discusses not only structural and environmental material characterization aspects but also the trends regarding the utilization of underground spaces This book contains papers presented at the Meeting and covers a wide range of topics including Use of underground space for industry Underground power stations Toxic and nuclear waste repositories Energy underground reservoirs Underground sewerage plants Waste storage and management Road and railway tunnels Utility tunnels Fire defence Defence against terrorist attacks

Human-Centered Built Environment Heritage Preservation Jeremy C. Wells,Barry L. Stiefel,2018-09-20

Human Centered Built Environment Heritage Preservation addresses the question of how a human centred conservation approach can and should change practice For the most part there are few answers to this question because professionals in the heritage conservation field do not use social science research methodologies to manage cultural landscapes assess historical significance and inform the treatment of building and landscape fabric With few exceptions only academic theorists have explored these topics while failing to offer specific usable guidance on how the social sciences can actually be used by heritage professionals In exploring the nature of a human centred heritage conservation practice we explicitly seek a middle ground between the academy and practice theory and application fabric and meanings conventional and civil experts and orthodox and heterodox ideas behind practice and research We do this by positioning this book in a transdisciplinary space between these dichotomies as a way to give voice and respect to multiple perspectives without losing sight of our goal that heritage conservation practice should fundamentally benefit all people We believe that this approach is essential for creating an emancipated built heritage conservation practice that must successfully engage very different ontological and epistemological perspectives
