

Process Versus Outcome Thought Focus and Advertising

Recent social psychological research demonstrates that certain types of mental simulations are particularly useful for helping individuals reach the things they envision (e.g., Taylor, Pitera, Rivlin, & Armer, 1998). More specifically, Taylor's (1989, Taylor, 1999; Taylor et al., 1998) recent research indicates that the most successful simulation focus on the process of achieving a goal rather than on the resources or outcomes of the goal. In this article, we extend simulations of persuasive versus outcome-focus and thought in advertising. In studies manipulating the focus of participants' thoughts while viewing a print advertisement, we find that process-focused thought results in significantly higher behavioral intentions than an outcome-focused thought when advertisement arguments are strong. However, in the case of weak advertisement arguments, process-focused thought actually lowers behavioral intentions compared to thoughts focusing on the end result or outcome of product usage. Thus, in addition to increasing the persuasive power of strong advertising claims, process-focused thinking appears to make individuals better or more discerning consumers who do not form behavioral intentions when it is inappropriate to do so.

In the popular press, self-help writers commonly advise people to simulate favorable outcomes and consequences to motivate successful achievement of individual goals (e.g., Penning, 1991; Paula, 1992). Some examples include visualizing one's self enjoying the benefits of losing or attaining one's financial goals or simulating one's self making the free throw shot that wins the basketball game (as opposed to imagining practicing free throw shots). Advertising also encourages consumers to simulate favorable outcomes of using products. A recent television advertisement for a luxury automobile was filmed from the driver's seat. The car is stopped at an intersection with a car next to it. The announcer says, "Imagine this is your only chance to make an impression. What type of impression would you like to leave?" In another advertising campaign, the California lottery encourages consumers to "Watch a little dream" of how they would spend their millions, were they to win. In these advertisements and many others, marketers encourage viewers to imagine positive outcomes of product usage.

Thus, in both the self-help domain and advertising, most instructions to simulate appear to focus on the enjoyment of achieved positive outcomes—on "eyes on the prize" focus. Recent research in social psychology, however, indicates that by focusing on the processes involved in goal-directed activities rather than on favorable outcomes, people are better able to achieve their goals (see the discussion of process-focused thoughts and its implications for the self-help literature provided in Taylor, Pitera, Rivlin, & Armer, 1998). The purpose of this article is to explore the distinction between outcome- and process-focused mental simulations as a possible tool for designing persuasive advertisements. In applying this research to the advertising domain, we extend current literature on process-focused mental simulation by demonstrating that the strength of a persuasive communication moderates the effect of simulation type (process vs. outcome) on behavioral intentions.

Albert J Raboteau Prize Best Book in Africana Religions Impeccably researched paints a colorful picture of religious diversity among Black people Journal of Africana Religions When Joseph Nathaniel Beckles registered for the draft in 1942 he rejected the racial categories presented to him and persuaded the registrar to cross out the check mark she had placed next to Negro and substitute Ethiopian Hebrew God did not make us Negroes declared religious leaders in black communities of the early twentieth century urban North They insisted that so called Negroes are in reality Ethiopian Hebrews Asiatic Muslims or raceless children of God Rejecting conventional American racial classification many black southern migrants and immigrants from the Caribbean embraced these alternative visions of black history racial identity and collective future thereby reshaping the black religious and racial landscape Focusing on the Moorish Science Temple the Nation of Islam Father Divine's Peace Mission Movement and a number of congregations of Ethiopian Hebrews Judith Weisenfeld argues that the appeal of these groups lay not only in the new religious opportunities membership provided but also in the novel ways they formulated a religious racial identity. Arguing that members of these groups understood their religious and racial identities as divinely ordained and inseparable, the book examines how this sense of self shaped their conceptions of their bodies, families, religious and social communities, space and place, and political sensibilities. Drawing on extensive archival research and incorporating a rich array of sources to highlight the experiences of average members, the book demonstrates that the efforts by members of these movements to contest conventional racial categorization contributed to broader discussions in black America about the nature of racial identity and the collective future of black people that still resonate today. A masterful work of religious history, a significant contribution to the study of religious narratives and their role in shaping African American identity and community in the past and the present. Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion

The A to Z of New Age Movements Michael York, 2009-06-17. The decline of institutionalized religion in the increasingly secularized West has been offset by the contemporary spiritual development understood in the form of emerging New Age movements. This reference presents the potpourri of spiritual and psycho-physical therapeutic practices associated with this affirmation of the individual's spiritual freedom, the expectation of a future golden age, the emphasis on self-development, and the holistic pluralism that sets the dominant pulse for innovative spirituality in the twenty-first century. The A to Z of New Age Movements furnishes profiles and explanations of New Age spokespeople and leaders of a range of human potential and self-help practices of countercultural spiritual developments and of different groups and organizations that identify as New Age. The dictionary consists of over 240 individual entries along with an introduction that describes the historical foundations of the New Age orientation and its relation with contemporary Western paganism. It also presents the sociological dimension of New Age expression as well as the kinds of criticism with which the New Age identity must contend. There is both a New Age Chronology and a bibliography also included.

Sandinista's Communism Donald C. Hodges, 2014-02-01. Drawing on previously unknown or unassimilated sources, Donald C. Hodges here presents an entirely new interpretation of the politics and philosophy of Augusto C. Sandino, the intellectual progenitor of Nicaragua's Sandinista revolution. The first part of the book investigates the political sources of Sandino's thought in the works of Babeuf, Buonarroti, Blanqui, Proudhon, Bakunin, Most, Malatesta, Kropotkin, Ricardo Flores Magón, and Lenin, a mixed legacy of pre-Marxist and non-Marxist authoritarian and libertarian communists. The second half of the study scrutinizes the philosophy of nature and history that Sandino made his own. Hodges delves deeply into this philosophy as the supreme and final expression of Sandino's communism and traces its sources in the Gnostic and millenarian occult undergrounds. This results in a rich study of the ways in which Sandino's revolutionary communism and communist spirituality intersect a spiritual politics that Hodges presents as more realistic than the communism of Karl Marx While accepting the current wisdom that Sandino was a Nicaraguan liberal and social reformer Hodges also makes a persuasive case that Sandino was first and foremost a communist although neither of the Marxist nor anarchist variety He argues that Sandino's eclectic communist spirituality was more of an asset than a liability for understanding the human condition and that his spiritual politics promises to be more relevant than Marxism Leninism for the twenty first century Indeed Hodges believes that Sandino's holistic communism embraces both deep ecology and feminist spirituality a finding that is sure to generate lively and productive debate Handbook of Religion and the Authority of Science James R.
