Control, Information, and Technological Change Gerald E. Flueckiger, 2012-12-06 Information theory cybernetics and the theory of finite automata are used to model learning by doing bounded rationality routine behavior and the formation of teams The non-neoclassical characterization of production developed in this book ignores the usual quantitative relationships between inputs and outputs and instead views production strictly as a problem of control and communication The motivation for this unconventional characterization of production comes from Schumpeter's critique of neoclassical economic theory Schumpeter argued that neoclassical economic theory and the habits of thought engendered by it was the major obstacle to acquiring an understanding of technological change The non-neoclassical characterization of production developed in this book is in keeping with how economic historians describe specific technological changes and how they write technological histories about particular machines firms or industries addresses basic issues in the history of labor and industry and makes an original contribution to the discussion of how technology and people interact American Studies Jack Salzman, American Studies Association, 1986-08-29 A major three volume bibliography including an additional supplement of an annotated listing of American Studies monographs published between 1900 and 1988
