No Cats in Vietnam Thomas F. Bayard, 2007-03-09 No Cats in Vietnam the Memoir of a Straightleg Engineer is a memoir that really was begun as a response to someones suggestion I swear I have thought from time to time of writing something longer than a newspaper article on subjects ranging from Vietnam to gun control to Conflict Resolution but this has seemed a necessary first step Besides I can get away with writing about my own life when that might be an impossible task on some other subject It is good training as I was told many many times in the army Seriously folks this is my autobiography with as many warts as I can stand I make no claim to be complete or completely honest This is simply the way the book turned out There were things I chose to omit and I know there will be people who will take offense but that is the way this book has to be I have gone back in time as far as I could go without resorting to hypnosis to help me recall things that are only shadows I have actually contemplated doing this especially to bring back a few hours of my year in Vietnam but it has not been recommended to me I leave it at that Without recounting the entire tale I should say only that this book is an account of my entire life up until now with as much accuracy and humor as I can muster If anyones life is interesting mine should be I have been enough places and gone through enough excitement and pain to make it so Enjoy
