The European Voter Jacques Thomassen, 2005-07-28 This book provides a systematic comparative analysis of how and why voting behaviour has changed in Europe in recent decades It has been widely argued that radical changes have occurred in the how and why of voting behaviour in Europe as a result of changes in the structure of society most notably the rise in material affluence and educational attainment and the decline in religious observance and the size of the working class But most tests of this proposition have been undertaken on single countries This book however systematically tests the validity of this proposition across various European countries The argument that social change has altered voting behaviour has been increasingly challenged on the grounds that it takes too little account of changes in the choices that are put before voters by the parties such as the promises and proposals that are put forward at election time This book therefore also assesses the relative explanatory power of claims that voting behaviour has changed because of changes in society against claims that it responds to changes in the offerings of political parties And it is clear from the analyses reported in this book that contrary to the claims of much of the extant literature the latter argument appears better able to account for many of the patterns and changes in European voting behaviour and thus the book constitutes an important challenge to much current academic orthodoxy This is the first book to provide a systematic comparison of the long term dynamics of the voting behaviour of individual voters across such a wide range of European countries taking into account the dynamics of the choices put before voters by the parties and for the first time relating this to the way voters behave Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics The General Editors are Max Kaase Professor of Political Science Vice President and Dean School of Humanities and Social Science International University Bremen and Kenneth Newton Professor of Comparative Politics University of Southampton The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research

Baun, 2016-09-16 This work is a cross national examination of the relationship between political culture and constitutionalism The countries studied include Nigeria Turkey and Japan Questions explored include whether constitutions must evolve and whether constitutionalism is only a western concept

The Presidentialization of Politics Thomas Poguntke, Paul Webb, 2007-04-27 The Presidentialization of Politics shows that the politics of democratic societies is moving towards a presidentialized working mode even in the absence of formal institutional changes These developments can be explained by a combination of long term structural changes in modern politics and societies contingent factors which fluctuate over time While these contingent short term factors relate to the personalities of office holders the overall political agenda and the majority situation in parliament there are several structural factors which are relatively uniform across modern nations First the internationalization of modern politics which is particularly pronounced within the European Union has led to an executive bias of the political process which has strengthened the role of political top elites vis vis their parliamentary groups and or their parties Their predominance has been amplified further by the vastly expanded steering capacities of state machineries which have severely reduced the scope of effective parliamentary control At the same time the declining stability of political alignments has increased the proportion of citizens whose voting decisions are not constrained by long standing party loyalties In conjunction with the mediatization of politics this has increased the capacity of political leaders to by pass their party machines and to appeal directly to voters As a result three interrelated processes have led to a political process increasingly moulded by the inherent logic of presidentialism increasing leadership power and autonomy within the political executive increasing leadership power and autonomy within political parties and increasingly leadership centred electoral processes The book presents evidence for this process of presidentialization for 14 modern democracies including the US and Canada While there are substantial cross national differences the overall thesis holds modern democracies are increasingly following a presidential logic of governance through which leadership is becoming more central and more powerful but also increasingly dependent on successful immediate appeal to the mass public

Implications for democratic theory are considered Human Rights Responsibilities in the Digital Age Jonathan Andrew,Frédéric Bernard,2021-08-26 This book examines the tangled responsibilities of states companies and individuals surrounding human rights in the digital age Digital technologies have a huge impact for better and worse on human lives while they can clearly enhance some human rights they also facilitate a wide range of violations States are expected to implement efficient measures against powerful private companies but at the same time they are drawn to technologies that extend their own control over citizens Tech companies are increasingly asked to prevent violations committed online by their users yet many of their business models depend on the accumulation and exploitation of users personal data While civil society has a crucial part to play in upholding human rights it is also the case that individuals harm other individuals online All three stakeholders need to ensure that technology does not provoke the disintegration of human rights Bringing together experts from a range of disciplines including law international relations and journalism this book provides a detailed analysis of the impact of digital technologies on human rights which will be of interest to academics research students and professionals concerned by this issue Comparing Pluralist Democracies Mattei Dogan,2019-03-06 This book is an

Steinberg,Stacy D. Vandever,2012-02-17

Combining the theoretical tools of comparative politics with the substantive concerns of environmental policy experts explore responses to environmental problems across nations and political systems How do different societies respond politically to environmental problems around the globe Answering this question requires systematic cross national comparisons of political institutions regulatory styles and state society relations The field of comparative environmental politics approaches this task by bringing the theoretical tools of comparative politics to bear on the substantive concerns of environmental policy This book outlines a comparative environmental politics framework and applies it to concrete real world problems of politics and environmental management After a comprehensive review of the literature exploring domestic environmental politics around the world the book provides a sample of major currents within the field showing how environmental politics intersects with such topics as the greening of the state the rise of social movements and green parties European Union expansion corporate social responsibility federalism political instability management of local commons and policymaking under democratic and authoritarian regimes It offers fresh insights into environmental problems ranging from climate change to water scarcity and the disappearance of tropical forests and it examines actions by state and nonstate actors at levels from the local to the continental The book will help scholars and policymakers make sense of how environmental issues and politics are connected around the globe and is ideal for use in upper level undergraduate and graduate courses
