

Filmstrips and Slides:

- ❑ Low cost and versatility are the two assets of these types of materials. Any teacher is capable of producing a useful material and local production offers many possibilities because of the desirability of familiar scenes and locale, with which the children can easily identify.

Tapes:

- ❑ Nonverbal children have exhibited a surprising amount of verbal response to taped questions in contrast to their usual hesitancy in speaking in the presence of a teacher or adult.
- ❑ The tape recorder also permits a story or lesson to be repeated several times so children can hear it as often as desired without constant supervision. Use of recorders a valuable tool to supplement the teacher's direct work with the individual child.
- ❑ The mobile phones can be used for Audio-conferencing where in the pupil can have the opportunity of listening and sometimes even can solve their queries by asking questions. These experiences are very useful for students in terms of counseling and guidance by the teacher.
