Decision Support Systems for Sustainable Development Gregory E. Kersten, Zbigniew Mikolajuk, Anthony Gar-On Yeh, 2006-03-01 In recent years much work has been done in formulating and clarifying the concept of sustainable development and related theoretical and research issues Now the challenge has shifted to designing and stimulating processes of effective planning and decision making at all levels of human activity in such a way as to achieve local and global sustainable development Information technology can help a great deal in achieving sustainable development by providing well designed and useful tools for decision makers One such tool is the decision support system or DSS This book explores the area of DSS in the context of sustainable development As DSS is a very new technique especially in the developing world this book will serve as a reference text primarily for managers government officials and information professionals in developing countries It covers the concept of sustainable development defines DSS and how it can be used in the planning and management of sustainable development and examines the state of the art in DSS use Other interested readers will include students teachers and analysts in information sciences DSS designers developers and implementors and international development agencies

Decision Oriented Educational Research considers a form of educational research that is designed to be directly relevant to the current information requirements of those who are shaping educational policy or managing educational systems. It was written for those who plan to conduct such research as well as for policy makers and educational administrators who might have such research conducted for them. The book is divided into three main parts. Part I is background. Chapter 1 describes some of the basic themes that are woven throughout subsequent chapters on decision oriented research. These themes include the importance of taking a systems view of educational research, of understanding the nature of decision and policy processes and how these influence system research, of integrating research activities into the larger system's processes, of the role of management in the research process, of researchers and managers sharing a sense of educational purposes and of emphasizing system improvement as a basic goal of research process. Chapter 2 is a discussion of the background of the research activities that form the bases of this book. Our collaboration with the Pittsburgh public school system is described as are the methods and structure we used to build the case histories of our work with the district. Part II encompassing chapters 3 through 9 addresses basic generalizations about decision oriented educational research that we have derived from our experiences.
