

Planning in the Face of Power

If planners ignore those in power, they assure their own powerlessness. Alternatively, if planners understand how relations of power shape the planning process, they can improve the quality of their analyses and empower citizen and community action. By focusing on the practical issues of information control, misinformation, and distorted communications more generally, this chapter will elaborate a pragmatic and progressive planning role for all those planning in the face of power.

Whether or not power corrupts, the lack of power surely frustrates. Planners know this only too well. They often feel overwhelmed by the exercise of private economic power, or by politics, or by both.¹ In health planning, for example, as in local land-use planning, planners must often react defensively to the initiatives of established, usually private medical care "providers" or project developers. Those providers have time, money, expertise, information, and control of capital; the countervailing consumers, in contrast, have few such resources. Nevertheless, planners in many areas are legally mandated to make democratic citizen participation in the planning process a reality rather than a romantic promise.

Furthermore, planners often have had little influence on the implementation of their plans. Those painstaking plans have too often ended up on the shelf or have been used to further political purposes they were never intended to serve. Given these conditions of work and the intensely political nature of planning practice, how then can planners work to fulfill their legal mandate to foster

Planning In The Face Of Power:

Planning in the Face of Power John Forester, 1989 Power and inequality are realities that planners of all kinds must face in the practical world In Planning in the Face of Power John Forester argues that effective public serving planners can overcome the traditional but paralyzing dichotomies of being either professional or political detached and distantly rational or engaged and change oriented Because inequalities of power directly structure planning practice planners who are blind to relations of power will inevitably fail Forester shows how in the face of the conflict ridden demands of practice planners can think politically and rationally at the same time avoid common sources of failure and work to advance both a vision of the broader public good and the interests of the least powerful members of society

Planning in the Face of Crisis Rachelle Alterman, 2005-07-08 Critics of urban and regional planning argue that it is best suited to manage incremental change Can a planner's skills and expertise be effective in handling a major crisis and large scale change The mass immigration from the former Soviet Union to Israel in the 1990s offers the opportunity to study one of the largest scale non disaster crisis situations in a democratic advanced economy country This book recounts the fascinating saga of how policymakers and planners at both the national and local levels responded to the formidable demand for housing and massive urban growth Planners forged new housing and land use policies and applied a streamlined but controversial planning law The outputs were impressive The outcomes and impacts changed the landscape and human scape of Israel heightening dilemmas of land use and urban policy in this high density country

Planning in the Face of Conflict John Forester, 2017-11-20 Bikers and hikers Sex workers and social conservatives Agencies and activists The people involved in planning for a site or a community can be like the Hatfields and McCoys And the process brings them together face to face and toe to toe How can planners take conflicted communities from passionate demands to practical solutions Facilitative leadership offers helpful answers Cornell University's John Forester has produced a dozen profiles of planning practitioners known for their successes in helping communities turn contentious conflicts into practical consensus This remarkable book tells their stories in their own words Lisa Beutler shows the way she got California's off highway vehicle users and recreationists on the same track Michael Hughes shares the search for common ground for HIV prevention in Colorado Shirley Solomon recalls how lessons learned in South Africa helped her build trust between Native Americans and county officials in the Pacific Northwest Forester and his panel of experts offer no simplistic formulas but a great deal of practical guidance From mind mapping to the Hawaiian concept of Ho oponopono making things right readers will come away with a wealth of ideas they can use to move from the heat of confrontation to the light of creative solutions in their communities

Urban Planning Theory Since 1945 Nigel Taylor, 1998-12-12 Taylor describes the development of urban planning ideas since the end of the Second World War outlining the main theories from the traditional view of planning as an exercise in physical design to recent views of planning as communicative action conflicts around urban developments and analyzes their shape in contemporary cities It offers an interdisciplinary framework for scholars to engage with the issue of planning conflicts focusing on both empirical and theoretical inquiry By reviewing different perspectives for planners to engage with conflicts and not simply mediate or avoid them Planning and Conflict provides a theoretically informed look forward to the future of engaged responsive city development that involves all its stakeholders Compromise Planning : A Theoretical Approach from a Distant Corner of Europe Louis C.

Planning and Conflict Enrico Gualini, 2015-02-11 Planning and Conflict discusses the reasons for

Wassenhoven,2022-03-28 The purpose of the book is to elaborate a planning theory which departs from the plethora of theories which reflect the conditions of developed countries of the North West The empirical material of this effort is derived from a country Greece which sits on the edge between North West and South East at the corner of Europe No doubt there is extensive international literature on planning theory in general from a bewildering variety of viewpoints The interested professional or student of urban and regional planning is certainly aware of the dizzying flood of books articles and research reports on planning theory and of their never ending borrowing of obscure concepts from more respectable scientific disciplines from mathematics to philosophy and from physics to economics human geography and sociology He or she probably observed that there is a growing interest in theoretical approaches from the viewpoint of the so called Global South The author of the present book has for many decades faced the impasse of attempting to transplant theories founded on the experience of the North West to countries with a totally different historical political social and geographical background He learned that the reality that planners face is unpredictable patchy and responsive to social processes frequently of a very pedestrian nature Planning strives to deal with private interests which planners are keen to envelop in a single public interest which is extremely hard to define The behaviour of the average citizen far from being that of the neoclassical model of the homo economicus is that of an individual a kind of homo individualis who interacts with the state and the public administration within a complex web of mutual dependence and negotiation The state and its administrative apparatus i e the key determinants and fixers of urban and regional planning policy bargain with this individual offer inducements exemptions derogations and privileges deviate unhesitatingly from their grand policy pronouncements but still defend the rationality and comprehensiveness of the planning system they have legislated and operationalized It is by and large a successful modus vivendi but only thanks to a constant practice of compromise Hence the term compromise planning which the author coined as an alternative to all the existing theoretical forms of planning This is the sort of planning and of the accompanying theory with which he deals in this book It is the outcome of experience and knowledge accumulated in a long personal journey of academic teaching in England and Greece research and professional involvement Encounters in Planning Thought

Beatrix Haselsberger,2017-01-06 Encounters in Planning Thought builds on the intellectual legacy of spatial planning through essays by leading scholars from around the world including John Friedmann Peter Marcuse Patsy Healey Andreas Faludi Judith Innes Rachelle Alterman and many more Each author provides a fascinating and inspiring unravelling of his or her own intellectual journey in the context of events political and economic forces and prevailing ideas and practices as well as their own personal lives This is crucial reading for those interested in spatial planning including those studying the theory and history of spatial planning Encounters in Planning Thought sets out a comprehensive intellectual institutional and practical agenda for the discipline of spatial planning as it heads towards its next half century Together the essays form a solid base on which to understand the most salient elements to be taken forward by current and future generations of spatial planners

Planning and the Intelligence of Institutions Enrico Gualini, 2018-02-06 This title was first published in 2001 The hierarchical approach of regional planning institutions is facing crisis In an era of globalization the conditions of urban growth dynamics is dependent on innovation entrepreneurial and economic structures and socio political and institutional forces As a result the notion of region has become more about social interaction than geographical location This volume examines how institutions must adapt and modify their roles to suit this changing pattern of development by implementing more consensus based approaches Using in depth analysis of an innovative state sponsored approach to growth management planning in the USA it assesses the effectiveness and success of putting into place more flexible concerted and negotiated approaches to issues such as inter institutional relations and inter governmental co ordination In what will be an essential contribution to the debate surrounding the future of regional planning and the role of institutions the volume highlights the limits and opportunities of these new policy approaches and will be a key resource for planners policy makers and researchers alike

Digital Participatory Planning Alexander Wilson, Mark Tewdwr-Jones, 2021-09-29 Digital Participatory Planning outlines developments in the field of digital planning and designs and trials a range of technologies from the use of apps and digital gaming through to social media to examine how accessible and effective these new methods are It critically discusses urban planning democracy and computing technology literature and sets out case studies on design and deployment It assesses whether digital technology offers an opportunity for the public to engage with urban change to enhance public understanding and the quality of citizen participation and to improve the proactive possibilities of urban planning more generally The authors present an exciting alternative story of citizen engagement in urban planning through the reimagination of participation that will be of interest to students researchers and professionals engaged with a digital future for people and planning

The Argumentative Turn in Policy Analysis and Planning Frank Fischer, John Forester, 2013-07-12 Public policy is made of language Whether in written or oral form argument is central to all parts of the policy process As simple as this insight appears its implications for policy analysis and planning are profound Drawing from recent work on language and argumentation and referring to such theorists as Wittgenstein Habermas Toulmin and Foucault these essays explore the interplay of language action and power in both the practice and the theory of policy making The contributors scholars of international renown who range across the theoretical spectrum emphasize the political nature of the policy planner s work and stress the role of persuasive arguments in practical decision making Recognizing the rhetorical communicative character of policy and planning deliberations they show that policy arguments are necessarily selective both shaping and being shaped by relations of power These essays reveal the practices of policy analysts and planners in powerful new ways as matters of practical argumentation in complex highly political environments They also make an important contribution to contemporary debates over postempiricism in the social and policy sciences Contributors John S Dryzek William N Dunn Frank Fischer John Forester Maarten Hajer Patsy Healey Robert Hoppe Bruce Jennings Thomas J Kaplan Duncan MacRae Jr Martin Rein Donald Schon J A Throgmorton

Town and Country Planning in the UK Simin Davoudi, David Webb, Geoff Vigar, John Pendlebury, Tim Townshend, Trevor Hart, Vincent Nadin, 2014-12-05 Town and country planning has never been more important to the UK nor more prominent in national debate Planning generates great controversy whether it s spending 80m and four years inquiry into Heathrow s Terminal 5 or the 200 proposed wind turbines in the Shetland Isles On a smaller scale telecoms masts take away house extensions and even fences are often the cause of local conflict Town and Country Planning in the UK has been extensively revised by a new author group This 15th Edition incorporates the major changes to planning introduced by the coalition government elected in 2010 particularly through the National Planning Policy Framework and associated practice guidance and the Localism Act It provides a critical discussion of the systems of planning the procedures for managing development and land use change and the mechanisms for implementing policy and proposals It reviews current policy for sustainable development and the associated economic social and environmental themes relevant to planning in both urban and rural contexts Contemporary arrangements are explained with reference to their historical development the influence of the European Union the roles of central and local government and developing social and economic demands for land use change Detailed consideration is given to the nature of planning and its historical evolution the role of the EU central regional and local government mechanisms for developing policy and managing these changes policies for guiding and delivering housing and economic development sustainable development principles for planning including pollution control the importance of design in planning conserving the heritage community engagement in planning The many recent changes to the system are explained in detail the new national planning policy framework the impact of the loss of the regional tier in planning and of the insertion of neighbourhood level planning the transition from development control to development management the continued and growing importance of environmental matters in planning community engagement partnership working changes to planning gain and the introduction of the Community Infrastructure Levy and new initiatives across a number of other themes Notes on further reading are provided and at the end of the book there is an extensive bibliography maintaining its reputation as the bible of British planning

The Routledge Handbook of Institutions and Planning in Action Willem Salet, 2018-07-03 The Routledge Handbook of Institutions and Planning in Action contains a selection of 25 chapters prepared by specialized international scholars of urban planning and urban studies focusing on the question of how institutional innovation occurs in practices of action The contributors share expertise on institutional innovation and philosophical pragmatism They discuss the different facets of these two conceptual frameworks and explore the alternative combinations through which they can be approached The relevance of these conceptual lines of thought will be exemplified in exploring the contemporary practices of sustainable climate proof urban transition The aim of the handbook is to give a boost to the turn of institutional analysis in the context of action in changing cities Both philosophical pragmatism and institutional innovation rest on wide international uses in social sciences and planning studies and may be considered as complementary for many reasons However the combination of these different approaches is all but evident and creates a number of dilemmas After an encompassing introductory section entitled Institutions in Action the handbook is further divided into the following sections Institutional innovation Pragmatism The Dimension of Action On Justification Cultural and Political Institutions in Action Institutions and Urban Transition

Evaluation in Planning Nathaniel Lichfield, Angela Barbanente, Dino Borri, Abdul Khakee, Anna Prat, 2013-03-09 This book is the result of a three day workshop on Evaluation in theory and practice in spatial planning held in Ramsey Hall University College London in September 1996 Some 30 people from 8 different countries attended and 20 papers were presented The majority of them now form the basis for this book This occasion was the third on the topic the two preceding having taken place in Umea in June 1992 and in Bari in 1994 Following these three meetings we can now say that this small industrious international family really enjoy meeting up from time to time at each others places in the presence of older members and new children each one presenting his her own recent experiences It particularly enjoys exchanging views and arguing about the current state and the future of evaluation in spatial planning all families have their vices It is also pleasing to see these experiences and discussions resulting in a book for those who could not attend and for the broader clan in the field Not long time ago but ages in the accelerated academic time scale evaluation in planning established its own role and distinct features as an instrument for helping the decision making process Now this role and these features are exposed to major challenges First the evolution of planning theory has lead to the conception of new planning paradigms based on theories of complexity and communicative rationality

Planning as Persuasive Storytelling James A. Throgmorton,1996-07 Planning as Persuasive Storytelling is a revealing look at the world of political conflict surrounding the Commonwealth Edison Company s ambitious nuclear power plant construction program in northern Illinois during the 1980s Examining the clash between the utility consumer groups community based groups the Illinois Commerce Commission and the City of Chicago Throgmorton argues that planning can best be thought of as a form of persuasive storytelling A planner s task is to write future oriented texts that employ language and figures of speech designed to construct constituencies that the planner s vision is both desirable and feasible Though seeking to persuade the planner must also remain open to transformation through honest engagement with contending stories Juxtaposing stories about efforts to construct Chicago s electric future Planning as Persuasive Storytelling suggests a shift in how we think about planning In order to account for the fragmented and conflicted nature of contemporary American life and politics that shift would be away from science and the experts and toward persuasive storytelling by diverse authors P 4 of cover
