Points Of View In The Modern History Of Psychology:

Points of View in the Modern History of Psychology Claude E. Buxton, 2013-10-22 Points of View in the Modern History of Psychology is a collection of papers that presents each individual contributor's expert knowledge of history in the field of psychology. One paper examines Wilhelm Wundt's concept of psychology as the propaedeutic science surviving and inspiring a generation or more of psychologists. Another paper discusses the early sources and the basic conceptions of functionalism as used in America. John B. Watson proclaims behaviorism as a new discipline in psychology with defining features such as an objective deterministic scientific and experimental method that can be used in both human and animal studies. Lieberman 1979, Mackenzie 1977, Miller, Galanter and Pribram 1960 oppose behaviorism on the grounds that it slights the purpose of psychology and focuses more on methodology to the detriment of theory. One paper notes that the acceptance or influence that a point of view has is based in some ways on the range and clarity of its connections with experimental and observational reality. This collection can prove useful for psychologists, behavioral scientists, psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, students of psychology, philosophy, or general history who are interested in the many viewpoints of psychology.

Companion to the History of Modern Science G. N. Cantor, G. N. Cantor, J. R. R. Christie, M. J. S. Hodge, R. C. Olby, 2020-10-07 The 67 chapters of this book describe and analyse the development of Western science from 1500 to the present day. Divided into two major sections, The Study of the History of Science and Selected Writings in the History of Science, the volume describes the methods and problems of research in the field and then applies these techniques to a wide range of fields. Areas covered include the Copernican Revolution, Genetics, Science and Imperialism, the History of Anthropology, Science and Religion, Magic and Science. The companion is an indispensable resource for students and professionals in History, Philosophy, Sociology and the Sciences, as well as the History of Science. It will also appeal to the general reader interested in an introduction to the subject.

The Escape of the Mind Howard Rachlin, 2014 The Escape of the Mind argues that in developing techniques of self control and social cooperation it is useful to question the almost universally accepted belief that our minds exist inside our bodies. We should look for our minds neither in our introspections nor in our brains but in our long term behavioral patterns.

Constructing the Subject Kurt Danziger, 1994-01-28 Constructing the Subject traces the history of psychological research methodology from the nineteenth century to the emergence of currently favored styles of research in the second quarter of the twentieth century. Kurt Danziger considers methodology to be a kind of social practice rather than simply a matter of technique. Therefore his historical analysis is primarily concerned with such topics as the development of the social structure of the research relationship between experimenters and their subjects, as well as the role of the methodology in the relationship of investigators to each other in a wider social context. The book begins with a historical discussion of introspection as a research practice and proceeds to an analysis of diverging styles of psychological investigation. There is an extensive exploration of the role of quantification and statistics in the historical development of psychological research The influence of the social context on research practice is illustrated by a comparison of American and German developments especially in the field of personality research In this analysis psychology is treated less as a body of facts or theories than a particular set of social activities intended to produce something that counts as psychological knowledge under certain historical conditions This perspective means that the historical analysis has important consequences for a critical understanding of psychological methodology in general A
