Making Public Policy Decisions Damon Alexander, Jenny M. Lewis, 2014-12-05 To understand public policy decisions it is imperative to understand the capacities of the individual actors who are making them how they think and feel about their role and what drives and motivates them However the current literature takes little account of this preferring instead to frame the decisions as the outcomes of a rational search for value maximising alternatives or the result of systematic and well ordered institutional and organisational processes Yet understanding how personal and emotional factors interact with broader institutional and organisational influences to shape the deliberations and behaviour of politicians and bureaucrats is paramount if we are to construct a more useful nuanced and dynamic picture of government decision making This book draws on a variety of approaches to examine individuals working in contemporary government from freshly trained policy officers to former cabinet ministers and prime ministers It provides important new insights into how those in government navigate their way through complex issues and decisions based on developed expertise that fuses formal rational techniques with other learned behaviours memories emotions and practiced forms of judgment at an individual level This innovative collection from leading academics across Australia Europe the United Kingdom and North America will be of great interest to researchers educators advanced students and practitioners working in the fields of political science public management and administration and public policy

Water Governance as Connective Capacity Nanny Bressers, 2016-02-11 Water is becoming one of the world's most crucial concerns A third of the world's population has severe water shortage while three quarters of the global population lives in deltas which run the risk of severe flooding In addition many more face problems of poor water quality While it is apparent that drastic action should be taken in reality water problems are complex and not at all easy to resolve There are many stakeholders involved industries local municipalities farmers the recreational sector environmental organisations and others who all approach the problems and possible solutions differently This requires delicate ways of governing multi actor processes This book approaches the concept of water management from an interdisciplinary and non technical but governance orientation It departs from the fragmented nature of water management showing how these lack cooperation joint responsibility and integration and instead argues that the capacity to connect to other domains levels scales organizations and actors is of utmost importance Connective capacity revolves around connecting arrangements such as institutions actors for instance individuals and approaches such as instruments These three carriers of connectedness can be applied to different focal points the objects of fragmentation and integration in water management The book distinguishes five different focal points 1 government layers and levels 2 sectors and domains 3 time orientation of the long and the short term 4 perceptions and actor frames 5 public and private spheres Each contributor pays attention to a specific combination of one focal point and one connective carrier Bringing together case studies from countries including The Netherlands United Kingdom Romania Sweden Finland Italy India Canada and the United States the book focuses on the question of how to deal with the various sources of fragmentation in water governance by organizing meaningful connections and developing connective capacity In doing so it provides useful scientific and practical insights into how connective capacity in water governance can be enhanced
