Library, The European Voter Jacques Thomassen, 2005-07-28 This book provides a systematic comparative analysis of how and why voting behaviour has changed in Europe in recent decades It has been widely argued that radical changes have occurred in the how and why of voting behaviour in Europe as a result of changes in the structure of society most notably the rise in material affluence and educational attainment and the decline in religious observance and the size of the working class But most tests of this proposition have been undertaken on single countries This book however systematically tests the validity of this proposition across various European countries The argument that social change has altered voting behaviour has been increasingly challenged on the grounds that it takes too little account of changes in the choices that are put before voters by the parties such as the promises and proposals that are put forward at election time This book therefore also assesses the relative explanatory power of claims that voting behaviour has changed because of changes in society against claims that it responds to changes in the offerings of political parties And it is clear from the analyses reported in this book that contrary to the claims of much of the extant literature the latter argument appears better able to account for many of the patterns and changes in European voting behaviour and thus the book constitutes an important challenge to much current academic orthodoxy This is the first book to provide a systematic comparison of the long term dynamics of the voting behaviour of individual voters across such a wide range of European countries taking into account the dynamics of the choices put before voters by the parties and for the first time relating this to the way voters behave Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics The General Editors are Max Kaase Professor of Political Science Vice President and Dean School of Humanities and Social Science International University Bremen and Kenneth Newton Professor of Comparative Politics University of Southampton The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research Labor Literature United States. Intellectuals and the State in Twentieth-Century Mexico Roderic Ai Camp, 1985 In developing countries the extent to which intellectuals disengage themselves in state activities has widespread consequences for the social political and economic development of those societies Roderic Camps examination of intellectuals in Mexico is the first study of a Latin American country to detail the structure of intellectual life rather than merely considering intellectual ideas Camp has used original sources including extensive interviews to provide new data about the evolution of leading Mexican intellectuals and their relationship to politics and politicians since 1920 Professional Journal of the United States Army , 1980 Political Repression Linda Camp Keith, 2011-11-29 The world seems to have reached agreement on a set of ideals regarding state human rights behavior and the appropriate institutions to promote and protect those ideals The global script for state legitimacy calls for a written constitution or the equivalent with an embedded bill of rights democratic processes and institutions and increasingly a judicial check on state power to protect human rights While the progress toward universal formal adherence to this global model is remarkable Linda Camp Keith argues that the substantive meaning of this progress is much less clear In Political Repression she seeks to answer two key questions Why do states make formal commitments to democratic processes and human rights What effect do these commitments have on actual state behavior especially political repression The book begins with a thorough exploration of a variety of tools of state repression and presents evidence for substantial formal acceptance of international human rights norms in constitutional documents as well as judicial independence Keith finds that these institutions reflect the diffusion of global norms and standards the role of transnational networks of nongovernmental organizations and an electoral logic in which regimes seek to protect their future interests Economic liberalism on the other hand decreases the likelihood that states adopt or maintain these provisions She demonstrates that the level of judicial independence is influenced by constitutional structures and that levels of judicial independence subsequently achieved in turn diminish the probability of state repression of a variety of rights She also finds strong evidence that rights provisions may indeed serve as a constraint on state repression even when controlling for many other factors
