Romantic Dialogues and Afterlives Monika Coghén,Anna Paluchowska-Messing,2020 Romantic writers often asserted their individuality but this assertion tended to take the form of positioning themselves in relation to other authors and literary texts Thus they implicitly acknowledged the rich network of broadly understood poetic dialogue as an important and potent source for their own creativity When in 1816 John Keats wrote Great spirits now on earth are sojourning he celebrated the originality of his contemporaries and the historical significance of his times pointing to deep interest in the hum of mighty works in all the fields of human activity to which the nations ought to listen Keats's sonnet suggests not only stimulating exchanges between poets artists and social thinkers in the same language but also the idea of transnational appreciation and dialogue The volume takes up this idea and explores the dialogues of Romantic authors within the wide scope of European and American cultures Essays by scholars from Germany Britain Bulgaria Poland Canada and the United States of America examine Romantic writers responses to their contemporaries explore their dialogues with the culture of the past and their interactions across the arts and sciences They also scrutinize the Romantics far reaching influence on later writers and artists and thus extend the network of artistic exchange to modern times The volume offers a rich tapestry of interconnections that span across time and space interlace languages and cultures and link Romantic writers and artists with their predecessors and successors across Europe and America The essays in the collection invite the reader to join ongoing dialogues between writers and their audiences of the past and present

Maria Edgeworth was born at Black Bourton Oxfordshire on January 1st 1768 Her early years were with her mother's family in England Sadly her mother died when Maria was five Maria was educated at Mrs Lattafire's school in Derby in 1775 There she studied dancing French and other subjects Maria transferred to Mrs Devis's school in Upper Wimpole Street London Her father began to focus more attention on Maria in 1781 when she nearly lost her sight to an eye infection She returned home to Ireland at 14 and took charge of her younger siblings She herself was home tutored by her father in Irish economics and politics science literature and law Despite her youth literature was in her blood Maria also became her father's assistant in managing the family's large Edgeworthstown estate Maria first published 1795 with Letters for Literary Ladies That same year An Essay on the Noble Science of Self Justification written for a female audience advised women on how to obtain better rights in general and specifically from their husbands Practical Education 1798 is a progressive work on education Maria's ambition was to create an independent thinker who understands the consequences of his or her actions Her first novel Castle Rackrent was published anonymously in 1800 without her father's knowledge It was an immediate success and firmly established Maria's appeal to the public Her father married four times and the last of these to Frances a year younger and a confidante of Maria who pushed them to travel more widely London Britain and Europe were all now visited The second series of Tales of Fashionable Life 1812 did so well that she was now the most commercially successful novelist of her age She particularly worked hard to improve the living standards of the poor in Edgeworthstown and to provide schools for the local children of all and any denomination After a visit to see her relations Maria had severe chest pains and died suddenly of a heart attack in Edgeworthstown on 22nd May 1849 She was 81 Romantic Metropolis James Chandler, Kevin Gilmartin, 2005-10-13 This 2005 collection of essays challenges the traditional conception that British Romanticism was rooted in nature and rural life by showing that much of what was new about Romanticism was born in the city. The essays examine the works and events of the Romantic period from the point of view of the urban world where rapid developments in population, industry, communication, trade, and technology set the stage and the tone for many of the great achievements in literature and culture. The great metropolis appears as both fact and figure. London is its paradigm, but the metropolitan perspective is also borrowed and projected elsewhere. In this volume, some of the most exciting critics of Romanticism explore diverse cultural productions from poems and paintings to exhibition sites, panoramas, and political organizations to do long overdue justice to the place of the city both as topic and as location in British Romanticism. Charles Robert Maturin and the haunting of Irish romantic Fiction Christina Morin, 2017-06-01 A self-described disappointed author, Charles Robert Maturin (1780-1824) has been largely relegated to the margins of literary history since his death in 1824. Yet as this study demonstrates, he exerted a fundamental influence on the development of Irish fiction in the early nineteenth century. In particular, his novels dramatically underscore the continuing presence and deployment of the Gothic mode in Romantic Ireland, an influence now frequently overlooked in critical attention to the national and regional forms popularized in Ireland in the wake of Anglo-Irish Union (1801). Working from Jacques Derrida's influential theory on ghosts, this study positions Maturin as the cornerstone on which to build a new paradigm of Irish Romantic fiction, one which accounts for the spectral traces of the past cultural, social, and political evident in early nineteenth-century Irish fiction. As it does so, it calls for renewed critical and popular attention to an author who himself continues spectrally to emerge in the works of his literary successors.

Romantic Ireland Paddy Lyons, Willy Maley, John Miller, 2013-10-17 The long nineteenth century, arguably the most significant period in Irish history, is marked by a series of events that changed the political landscape of the nation forever and gave rise to art and ideas of international importance. At one end of this tumultuous period, we have Grattan's Parliament, the United Irishmen, the Rebellion of 1798 led by Wolfe Tone, and the Union of 1801; and at the other, the fall of Parnell, the Easter Rising, Civil War, and partition. Between times, there are the great hinge events of Catholic Emancipation, the Famine, and the Land War. From Wolfe Tone to Maud Gonne, Ireland went through a period of enormous upheaval that carved out the culture and politics of the modern nation. Irish Studies has not yet fully engaged with the range and richness of this material, nor have critics in the various Anglophone literary fields grasped the extent to which Irish and Scottish events and authors contributed decisively to the development of their own areas. Bringing together an international line-up of established and emerging scholars, Romantic Ireland: From Tone to Gonne takes Irish Studies in new directions, in particular in terms of a cross-cultural comparison with Scotland and the distinct phenomenon of Unionism, thus breaking out of the double binds of Anglo-Irish approaches. The Irish-Scottish interface throws up fascinating insights that enhance our awareness of the interaction between colonialism, nationalism, and culture. All of the major figures of the period are represented here from Edgeworth and Moore to Yeats and Synge but there are other often less noticed but hugely significant writers such as Charles Robert Maturin Dion Boucicault and May Laffan There are non Irish commentators on Ireland like Cobbett and Engels as well as a series of key Scottish figures including Burns and Scott in addition to lesser known or lesser noticed Scottish writers with strong Irish interests such as R M Ballantyne and Robert Tannahill whose work opens up new and promising avenues into Irish writing Romantic Marginality Alex Watson,2015-10-06 This is the first critical study of Romantic era annotation or marginalia footnotes endnotes glossaries which formed a vital site of literary interaction

English Fiction of the Romantic Period 1789-1830 Gary Kelly,2016-04-15 English Fiction of the Romantic Period 1789 1830 is the first comprehensive historical survey of fiction from that period for many decades It combines a clear awareness of the period s social history with recent developments in literary criticism theory and history and explains the astounding variety of forms in Romantic fiction in terms of the various cultural political social regional and gender conflicts of the time It provides a broad ranging survey from the major authors and works through to the sub genres of the period Jan Austin and Sir Walter Scott are discussed alongside the Gothic Romance political and feminist fiction social satire and regional rural and historical novels It also provides a comparison of the methods of distribution and marketing and the availability of books then and now examines cheap popular fiction and children s fiction and considers the recent debate about the place of prose fiction in a Romantic literature hitherto dominated by poetry The novels and selected works of Maria Edgeworth. 12.

material As a result writing neglected or marginalised in one account will be restored to prominence in another as we reconstruct the past as a history of the present This collection of essays takes as its starting point the wide ranging work of Marilyn Butler on Romantic literature and includes contributions by some of the most prominent scholars of Romanticism working today The essays offer interesting perspectives on Maria Edgeworth Coleridge Austen Scott and others showing that the openness of modern critical perceptions matches and reflects the diversity of the literature and culture of the Romantic period itself
