Image and Geometry Processing for 3-D Cinematography Rémi Ronfard,Gabriel Taubin,2010-06-29 papers illustrated with examples They include wavelet bases implicit functions defined on a space grid etc It appears that a common pattern is the recovery of a controllable model of the scene such that the resulting images can be edited interaction Changing the viewpoint is only one important aspect but changing the lighting and action is equally important 2 Recording and representing three dimensional scenes is an emerging technology made possible by the convergence of optics geometry and computer science with many applications in the movie industry and more generally in entertainment Note that the invention of cinema camera and projector was also primarily a scientific invention that evolved into an art form We suspect the same thing will probably happen with 3 D movies 3 Book Contents The book is composed of 12 chapters which elaborate on the content of talks given at the BANFF workshop The chapters are organized into three sections The first section presents an overview of the inter relations between the art of cinematography and the science of image and geometry processing the second section is devoted to recent developments in geometry and the third section is devoted to recent developments in image processing 3 1 3 D Cinematography and Applications The first section of the book presents an overview of the inter relations between the art of cinematography and ectance data entails substantial computational overhead This thesis investigates data driven approaches to improve the acquisition representation and rendering of re ectance data with a focus on predictive rendering to achieve precise and reliable visual simulations The rst part of the thesis focuses on acquisition of Bidirectional Re ectance Distribution Function BRDF and Spatially Varying BRDF SVBRDF functions that describe light surface interactions at each point based on incoming and re ected light directions Lightweight setups are initially explored to enable ef cient SVBRDF capture however their accuracy falls short for predictive rendering applications motivating the adoption of goniore ctometer based setups To improve measurement ef ciency of such setups a compressed sensing framework is introduced which incorporates a deterministic sampling strategy Additionally a uni ed formulation for sparse BRDF acquisition is presented allowing for the adaptation of sampling patterns and sample counts to the unique properties of each material This approach signi cantly enhances reconstruction quality while preserving the same sampling budget The second part of the thesis addresses modeling of re ectance measurements particularly the Bidirectional Texture Function BTF and BRDF Sparse representation techniques applied to existing BTF datasets prove effective in compressing texture data while enabling real time rendering of the measured BTFs Despite these advances a discrepancy often arises between model space errors introduced during approximation and the image space errors perceived in rendered outputs To bridge this gap a systematic psychophysical experiment is performed to analyze the impact of BRDF modeling techniques on rendered material quality Building on these ndings a neural metric is developed to evaluate perceptual accuracy directly in BRDF space This metric exhibits strong correlation with subjective human evaluations and presents the potential to guide BRDF tting algorithms toward solutions that produce visually accurate and compelling renderings of real world materials Bob Ross Rocks!
