

Remapping Area Knowledge: Beyond Global/Local

- “It is not that material and social events takes place in space and time, rather that materials and events make the spaces and times they occupy.” (Henri Lefebvre)
- The definition of areas employed in area knowledge has to be supple and open to change as global patterns of spatial differentiation themselves change
- The definition of areas and regions, nations and localities, the making and breaking of boundaries - political, economic, cultural - are integral to the gamut of social processes and flows
