generating exchanging and processing information and most significantly the competition among cities for these new key elements of the urban economy

Marketplace Trade and West African Urban Development Krys Ochia, 2022-01-01
 This book analyses how informal economy traders and the marketplace institution dominate the local economy in African cities According to the World Bank being an African reduces the probability that an individual is an entrepreneur in the manufacturing sector by more than 95 percent Exporting unprocessed strategic raw materials and importing large volumes of finished goods stagnate Africa's informal sector while creating formal jobs overseas This suggests employment increases in distributive trade and persistence of the marketplace institution in reducing urban unemployment and income inequality However there is limited knowledge of the men and women with permanent stalls in large urban marketplaces that function daily as a temporary city within a city even though they are the major actors in distribute trade More important their daily out of stall contacts resulting from maintaining complex social and economic relationships that determine the financial health of family business and the economy are generally unexplored and largely unknown but have significant unintended consequences on the urban mobility system Researchers planners development practitioners and policymakers have therefore not focused their attention and considered the impacts of the powerful economic institution marketplaces and traders in framing transport planning processes and urban development policies and that is the paradox surrounding marketplace trade and urban development in West Africa

Urban Development in China under the Institution of Land Rights Jieming Zhu, 2019-09-17
 How have the development and redevelopment of China's cities since the early 1950s transformed the settlements and fortunes of a fifth of the world's population Rapid urbanization since the 1980s has changed the nation from a rural society to an urban one marking it as one of the most significant transformations in history As a country with severe land scarcity land resources are intensively contested for during urbanization under the new regime of marketization This book focuses on the impact of the institution of land rights that have transitioned from private ownership to socialist state ownership and subsequently to public land leasing in the urban domain and to collective ownership in rural areas In the context of defining the relationship between the state and the market the gradualist transition of land rights gives rise to intriguing processes of place making The elaboration of these processes will engage several revealing conceptual notions land as a means of production land commodification ambiguous land rights incomplete land rights trading land use rights for land development rights institutional uncertainty land rent seeking and dissipating local developmental state danwei enterprises and more The newly created landed interests are embedded intricately within the urban spatial structure This book would especially be of interest to scholars interested in developmental economics urban planning geography public policies public management and sociology and also practitioners focusing on development and planning
