Semantic Web, Social Networks and Multiagent Systems Ryszard Kowalczyk, 2009-09-23 Computational collective intelligence CCI is most often understood as a subfield of artificial intelligence AI dealing with soft computing methods that enable group decisions to be made or knowledge to be processed among autonomous units acting in distributed environments. The needs for CCI techniques and tools have grown signi cantly recently as many information systems work in distributed environments and use distributed resources. Web based systems social networks and multi agent systems very often need these tools for working out consistent knowledge states resolving conflicts and making decisions. Therefore, CCI is of great importance for today and future distributed systems. Methodological theoretical and practical aspects of computational collective intelligence such as group decision making collective action coordination and knowledge integration are considered as the form of intelligence that emerges from the collabotion and competition of many individuals artificial and or natural. The application of multiple computational intelligence technologies such as fuzzy systems evolutionary computation neural systems consensus theory etc can support human and other collective intelligence and create new forms of CCI in natural and or artificial as tems
