

Cases and Commentaries

The Journal of Mass Media Ethics publishes case studies in which scholars and media professionals outline how they would address a particular ethical problem. Some cases are purely hypothetical, but most are from actual experience in newsrooms, corporations, and other agencies.

We invite readers to call our attention to current cases and issues. (There is a special need for good cases in advertising and public relations.) We also invite suggestions of names of people, both professionals and academicians, who might write commentaries. Tom Cooper, professor of Visual and Media Arts at Emerson College, wrote the following case.

Lou Hodges, Editor
Knight Professor in the Ethics of Journalism

Marketing New Software and Choreographing Intelligent Agents

Stan McGregor is confused. As senior research engineer for a major telecommunication and computer company, he is on the leading edge of developing important new technology called "choreographed intelligent agents." His synthesis of several types of software would allow his company to sell "need-fulfilling" services to clients over the Internet. Stan's invention would, for example, enable a client to tell his computer that he is lonely, and the choreographed intelligent agents would automatically produce a long list of options for the customer to relieve loneliness. Everything from a list of phone numbers of friends and relatives to a list of phone numbers of escort services, on-air psychologists, and lots more would appear on the computer screen all within 1 min.

On the one hand, Stan is happy because he may be on the verge of fame and fortune—if he and his company can only beat their competition to the market. On the other hand, Stan has struggled to identify several ethical issues, which he has listed in a memo to his supervisors. This list includes:

Management Aids, 19?? Market and Society C. M. Hann, Keith Hart, 2009-05-14 This volume considers how the work of Polanyi can contribute to our understanding of the relationship between market and society Case and Comment, 1895 Language and the Market Society Gerlinde Mautner, 2010-03-28 In education politics and religion there are strong indications that discourse is becoming marketized Around the world government ministries have re defined themselves as service providers universities draw up market driven curricula job seekers are asked to package themselves more effectively and there are advertising agencies specializing in the Christian marketplace And it is not only word choice that is effected higher level linguistic patterns such as genres and discursive practices such as the text and talk connected with performance measurement and public relations are also drawn into the orbit of market forces Through an intricate dialectic such patterns of linguistic choices in turn reinforce the social structures that shape them further consolidating the marketization process In a related development language within the business domain itself is increasingly shaped by strategic planning and control for example in branding message design and the promulgation of management buzzwords Marketization thus emerges as a globally unfolding process in which language holds a key position as both cause and effect and as both subject and object The book examines these phenomena from a linguistic and critical perspective drawing on critical discourse analysis sociological treatises of market society and critical management studies Power, Prose, and Purse Alison L. LaCroix, Saul Levmore, Martha Craven Nussbaum, 2019 Power Prose and Purse is an edited collection of essays that draw connections between literature economics and law The essays discuss novels that explore the time period between the Industrial Revolution and the Great Depression and analyze the insights that novelists may offer to law and economics while noting the tensions among these paradigms Commentary On Singapore, Volume 3: Culture, Identity And Society Gillian Koh, 2024-05-03 Thought leaders contributing to this volume include Alvin Tan Kwa Chong Guan Yang Razali Kassim Kishore Mahbubani Gerard Ee and more This volume comprises essays republished from various issues of the annual journal of the National University of Singapore Society called Commentary The third in a series that provides bite sized reviews of the history of Singapore s development in a range of areas of public policy it delves into the most challenging of them all defining the Singapore nation a quest that began just under six decades ago This is an enterprise that the pioneer generation of political leaders recognised would provide collective purpose and the soul to what government and people do to establish the young country an area that cannot rely on engineered solutions or diktat The authors have proffered in these essays their assessments of these attempts at crafting this identity but also the ground s responses be they through the development of the arts the government s political narratives economic strategy visions of urban development and civic activism Included are discussions on Singapore s model of multiracialism its vision of being a global city the impact of public policy in the redevelopment of housing estates and an appeal to adopt a model of empowerment in addressing the needs of the poor incorporating what citizens are saying about who we are and wish to be as a people There is no single definition of what the Singapore nation is nor should we wish for easy answers as they have to be created and grasped on the ground There is no final destination The authors make us all too aware that it will be an enduring journey into being which is enriched by the freedom to explore ideas ideals values the self and the metaphysical condition of being a community of unity that is paradoxically necessarily comfortable with plurality hybridity and change Owning this common journey is probably what distinguishes Singaporeans as a people and the volume reminds readers of that

Modernism and the Culture of Market Society John Xiros Cooper, 2004-09-02 Many critics argue that the modernist avant garde were always in opposition to the commercial values of market driven society For John Xiros Cooper the avant garde bears a more complex relation to capitalist culture than previously acknowledged He argues that in their personal relationships gender roles and sexual contacts the modernist avant garde epitomised the impact of capitalism on everyday life Cooper shows how the new social cultural and economic practices aimed to defend cultural values in a commercial age but in this task modernism became the subject of a profound historical irony Its own characterising techniques styles and experiments deployed to resist the new nihilism of the capitalist market eventually became the preferred cultural style of the very market culture which the first modernists opposed In this broad ranging 2004 study John Xiros Cooper explores this provocative theme across a wide range of Modernist authors including Joyce Eliot Stein and Barnes
