Scented Gardens For The Blind:

Scented Gardens for the Blind Janet Frame, 1992 Scented Gardens For The Blind Janet Frame, 1964 Scented gardens for the blind ostensibly follows the members of the fractured Glace family suffering from different forms of sensory deprivation the daughter mute the mother blind the father estranged yet each living in a vivid world of their own making While the father looks to the past in his obsessions with genealogy and toy soldiers the modern age hangs over them with the hint of nuclear apocalypse But all is not what it seems Back cover Beyond the Word Jeanne Delbaere-Garant,

Scented Gardens for the Blind Janet Frame, 2009 Erlene lives silently inside her mind communicating only with imaginary Uncle Black Beetle Her parents believe that she must be cured of her muteness and that once she is cured she will make a statement crucial to humankind Scented Gardens for the Blind Helen Carkeek, 197? The Subject and the World in Janet Frame's "Scented Gardens for the Blind" Jovita Palmeira, 2001 Scented Gardens for the Blind Janet Frame, 2007 Hailed by one reviewer as likely a work of genius Scented Gardens for the Blind first published in 1963 ostensibly follows the members of the fractured Glace family suffering from different forms of sensory deprivation the daughter mute the mother blind the father estranged yet each living in a vivid world of their own making While the father looks to the past in his obsessions with genealogy and toy soldiers the modern age hangs over them with the hint of nuclear apocalypse But all is not what it seems in this dark and dazzling novel and Janet Frame's narrative virtuosity is expressed in an ending that makes the reader re-interpret all that has gone before Modernisation in the form of electricity and the Overspill from London confronts the inhabitants of the small English village of Little Burgelstatham in the richly textured The Adaptable Man first published in 1965 While some amongst the large cast of characters prefer to live in the past and avoid modern life others adapt and welcome its arrival not least Muriel Baldry who can now hang her Venini chandelier and throw a dinner party to celebrate But does adapting to the twentieth century demand darker deeds C K Stead wrote of this comedy of manners that Frame that most authentic firm and unadaptable lady planted landmines everywhere in those bogus English fields Manifold Utopia Marc Delrez, 2021-10-01 This study of Janet Frame's fiction addresses with unusual directness the Utopian momentum that underpins her concern with fundamental social issues traditionally highlighted in existing criticism of her work The idea behind this book is that Frame's critique of society while it is offered for its own sake on one level should not lead us to neglect the author's more speculative interest in an alternative conception of the human person Her engagement in a species of experimental portraiture proves elusive though owing to an indirectness of approach that usually takes the form of thematic circumscription rather than explicit representation For example the figure of the mute child recurrent in her work may well testify to a concern with the plight of the mentally ill but on another level it also points to an envelope of intractable experience which it is the artist's task to penetrate and explain Such aspiration is inseparable from the search for a new medium of expression felt to be necessary if one is to meet the challenge of apprehending the scope of pioneering knowledge

This close reading of the novels reveals that the alternative dimension of experience to be found in Frame's novels is characterized by an intact capacity for remembering or for imaginatively re-creating eclipsed aspects of the present. Frame's view of Utopia thus turns out to be manifold: it is existential and ontological, linguistic and epistemological, but also historical and political. An unravelling of these intertwined strains then serves to clarify the complex question of Frame's post-colonial sensibility, which cannot be said to rely on a sense of rigid identity, whether national or otherwise. Lo Specchio Infranto Anna Grazia Mattei, 1985 The Ring of Fire Jeanne Delbaere, 1992 The Unharnessed World Cindy Gabrielle, 2015-06-18

Though New Zealand author Janet Frame (1924–2004) lived at a time of growing dissatisfaction with European cultural models and though her autobiography, fiction, and letters all testify to the fact that a direct encounter between herself and Buddhism occurred, her work has so far never been examined from the vantage point of its indebtedness to Buddhism. It is of the utmost significance, however, that a Buddhist navigation of Frame's texts should shed fresh light on large segments of the Framean corpus which have tended to remain obdurately mysterious. This includes passages centering on such themes as the existence of a non-dual world or a character's sudden embrace of a non-ego-like self. Of equal significance is the conclusion one then draws that this unharnessed world, which human beings are often unable to embrace, has always been right under their nose: for whenever the aspect of the intellect that filters perceptions into mutually excluding categories fails to function, he or she finds a place of subjective arrival in and sees this supposedly unknowable beyond. Thus, possibly against the grain of mainstream criticism, this study argues that Janet Frame constantly seeks ways through which the infinite and the Other can be approached, though not corrupted by the perceiving self, and that she found in the Buddhist epistemology a pathway towards evoking such alterity. Imagination and the Creative Impulse in the New Literatures in English, 2021-11-01

Imagination and the Creative Impulse in the New Literatures in English brings together the proceedings of a symposium organised by the editors at the University of Trento in 1990. At a time when the study of the post-colonial literatures is gaining more widespread recognition, scholars based mainly at universities in Italy and Germany were invited to address the manner in which writers are giving literary expression to the complexity of contemporary post-colonial and multicultural societies and to consider, from their differing perspectives, on the new literatures' central questions of formal experimentation, linguistic innovation, social and political commitment, textual theory and cross-culturality. Focusing on such major writers such as Achebe, Soyinka and Walcott, as well as on lesser-known figures such as Jack Davis, Witi Ihimaera, Rohinton Mistry and Manohar Malgonkar, the contributors take up many themes characteristic of the new literatures: the challenge posed to traditional authority, the expression of national identity, the role of literature in the liberation struggle, modes of literary practice in multicultural societies, the relationship of the new literatures in English to that of the former metropolitan centre and the complex intertextuality characterizing much of the literary production of post-colonial societies. Janet Frame Claire Bazin, 2011
