Memoirs of a Caddy David Noonan, 1993 In the summer of 1968 a seventeen year old caddy at Colonial Valley Country Club experiences romance sex love heartbreak and tragic death as he grows into manhood Reprint Memoirs of a Caddy David J. Noonan, 1991 With humor and pathos a young caddy from a large middle class Catholic family tells what it was like to come of age in the mid 60 s when America was beginning to fall apart Protagonist Jim Mooney 17 has some of the wistfulness but none of the big city veneer of Holden Caulfield he s the product of a small town 40 miles due west of New York and his feet are solidly planted on the ground Jim plays cards with the other caddies a colorful group to the last man drinks and hungers for sex but he s the sort who s going to steer a steady course through life Not so his older brother Matt at loose ends and courting danger whether with the wife of a golfer he caddies for or in the jungles of Vietnam Meanwhile the social strata of the town steeped in Revolutionary War history is well delineated from the country club where the caddies are the put upon proles and the golfers are judged by their tips to teenage parties where a kid like Jim straddles the social barrier Episodes rich in laughter include a double date Jim goes on with an upper class girl in a Cadillac rescued from a pond and imperfectly restored a little problem with the brakes There is also a wonderfully evocative holiday on the hot relentlessly sunny Jersey shore suddenly cooled by the draft leading in lockstep to Vietnam The one drawback here is that Jim is so normal that his attitudes offer few surprises Although covering familiar territory small town America and a young man moving from childhood certainties to the ambiguities of adult life first novelist Noonan the nonfiction Neuro 1989 writes so well that it s worth the trip Kirkus Memoirs and correspondence \(official & familiar\) Robert Murray Keith, 1849
