

standard practice here is to rely upon racial and religious differences to unify supporters and stigmatize critics: You're either with us or against us, a loyal subject or a "terrorist." These tactics remain effective, especially during "wartime," but they are also newly vulnerable to internal divisions. The diasporic world, the many millions of post-colonial immigrants now in the Northern countries, and the legacy of anti-racist and civil rights movements, all potentially undermine such authoritarian appeals. The dimension of religious pluralism is especially important now. Why? Because racial and religious profiling are converging. Because Islamophobia is threatening to polarize the globe once again, this time in a nuclear age. And because religious fundamentalism — North and South, East and West — is itself a direct threat to democracy.

The Body is the Person: The body was a key topic at Durban, because racial identity is always about the body. At Durban, there was discussion about enslavement (ownership of one's body by another) past and present, about trafficking in women's and children's (particularly girls') bodies, AIDS and other diseases as racial phenomena, and about the multiform linkages between sex/gender and race. It is not news that racism derives much of its energy from sexism, from the efforts of men to possess and control women's bodies. Nor is it surprising that authoritarian and anti-democratic rule takes women as its first hostages. Whether traditional or modern, whether religious or corporate, whether opposing the baroque, or resisting the maquilas and sweatshops that dot the globe, a central thread of democratic movements — anti-racist, anti-globalization and anti-authoritarian — is the liberation of women. The right of all human beings to control over their own bodies is a fundamental democratic demand.

In Lieu of a Conclusion: These are only tentative thoughts on the enormous challenge we — our movement, our radical democratic commitments — face in the post-Durban, and especially post-9/11, era. But this work will continue; it is part of a larger project. Numerous activists and writers are struggling with these issues. Not through any one set of ideas, but through the aggregation and synthesis of many efforts to make sense of the current crisis, will we advance toward a new politics. Ultimately, while ideas may be important, what we all rely upon most is the great unfulfilled desire for freedom that exists in human beings. Our task as a movement is to interpret and help organize that desire.

Reflections in a Jaundiced Eye: Durban and Beyond

by Wade Henderson

It's been only a few months since the tragedy of September 11, but it's already cliché to suggest to those of us who live in this country how deeply the events of that day have affected our lives and seared our psyches. We know firsthand that the magnitude of loss is a grievous blow, both in lost lives and lost political innocence. And as if that weren't disconcerting enough, we now find ourselves thrust into the global "war against terrorism," a new kind of conflict with uncertain targets and even more uncertain consequences beyond the borders of Afghanistan. Did I forget to mention that we're simultaneously fighting a bio-terrorist attack of anthrax, which may be related to these events or may be from a domestic source?

America is at war; and Americans are on edge! Not surprisingly, public attention is turned to the economic recession and important questions of national security and the newly designated homeland defense. Unfortunately, questions regarding civil liberties, human rights and policies affecting the broader domestic agenda are being forced into the back of the bus at their time of greatest need.

One of the most frequently asked questions in the immediate aftermath of the September 11 attack was, "Why do the terrorists hate us?" And not unexpectedly, the immediate reaction of many Americans seemed based on anger and patriotic pride, not analysis: "There can be no adequate explanation for such a heinous act!" "We stand for freedom, and they resent it." There is truth in these statements, but being right is not always enough. If our nation is to overcome the challenges of the moment and move to a long-term solution to the problem of global terrorism, we will need a deeper, more perceptive analysis to

Reflections of a

Jaundiced Eye in Winter Bloom and the Tragedy of Adam and Eve Arthur Ruffino, 2018-03-15 From the Preface

Reflections of a Jaundiced Eye in Winter Bloom is a collection of fleeting thoughts randomly written over a lifetime. Often they were recorded on scraps of paper for later scrutiny. Sometimes they were incorporated in travel diaries prompted by experiences of the time; occasionally they were nascent musings awaiting later revisits. The compilation can be read leisurely and selectively since continuity is not requisite. The work is aimed at readers who enjoy browsing through witticisms, quips, aphorisms, and axioms. It is assumed that readers may not share the author's views or even appreciate some of the attempts at sardonic humor, but agreement is not in order. What is important is the willingness to screen another person's vision of this thing we call life. The Tragedy of Adam and Eve is a one-act play. It is an imaginary domestic drama about the apocryphal first family.

Reflections Through a Jaundiced Eye James McCurrach, 2014-01-13 Andrew is a troubled youth in search of direction. He finds himself groping to find his place in the face of numerous frustrations—frustrations that include trying to overcome a domineering Father who has very specific ideas about Andrew's future. In the midst of many social upheavals, Andrew must also deal with incipient homosexuality that later overtakes his life. Despite trying to throw over his Father's yoke, there is a residue of needing to please him and hope for his approval. Andrew's Mom had always thought that he would be a late bloomer and over time that would prove to be the accurate truth. Reflections had long been an inborn part of Andrew's personality, and he would eventually find it cathartic to go back and explore all of it out loud and reflect on a varied and difficult past.

Through Alien Eyes Elena Popova, 2008 What do you think of those Russian brides? What do they think of YOU? International marriages bring a substantial number of newcomers to the US and contribute to the transformation of the basic institution of society: the family. When men are from Mars and women are aliens, the marital dynamic can be quite dramatic. A Russian-born journalist, Ms. Popova, shines a blinding light on some of the amusing and amazing oddities that are revealed when an outsider takes a blunt look at how we live.

Minding the South John Shelton Reed, 2017-07-12 For over three decades John Shelton Reed has been minding the South. He is the author or editor of thirteen books about the region. Despite his disclaimer concerning the formal study of Southern history, Reed has read widely and in depth about the South. His primary focus is upon Southerners' present-day culture, but he knows that one must approach the South historically in order to understand the place and its people. Why is the South so different from the rest of America? Rupert Vance Reed's predecessor in sociology at Chapel Hill once observed that the existence of the South is a triumph of history over geography and economics. The South has resisted being assimilated by the larger United States and has kept a personality that is distinctly its own. That is why Reed celebrates the South. The chapters in this book cover everything from great thinkers about the South—Eugene D. Genovese, C. Vann Woodward, M. E. Bradford—to the uniqueness of a region that was once a hotbed of racism but has recently attracted hundreds of thousands of black people transplanted from the North There are also chapters about Southerners who have devoted their talents to politics soft drinks rock and roll and jewelry design Reed writes with wit and Southern charm never afraid to speak his mind even when it comes to taking his beloved South to task While readers may not share all his opinions most will agree that John Shelton Reed is one of the best South watchers there is Precious
