Library,1963 The Far North: Exploration in the Arctic Regions Elisha Kent Kane,2019-12-09 In The Far North Exploration in the Arctic Regions Elisha Kent Kane presents a vivid chronicle of his arduous adventures in the icy expanses of the Arctic Written in a compelling narrative style Kane combines meticulous observations and a rich descriptive prose that brings the stark haunting beauty of the polar landscape to life Contextually the book emerges from the 19th century age of exploration a period characterized by human ambition to traverse uncharted territories as well as the burgeoning interest in the natural sciences which Kane seamlessly intertwines with his personal accounts of survival and discovery Elisha Kent Kane a notable American explorer and physician was deeply influenced by his medical training and fascination with the polar regions His extensive experience from earlier expeditions fueled his desire to document both the challenges faced by explorers and the scientific opportunities inherent in such ventures Kane s personal narrative is enriched by his enduring commitment to knowledge and understanding of Arctic environments a perspective that was sadly rare in the often glorified and sensationalized accounts of his contemporaries For those captivated by the spirit of adventure and the intricacies of human exploration The Far North is a vital read It not only provides insight into the trials of navigating the Arctic but also reflects a profound respect for nature and science making it an essential addition to the library of any enthusiast of exploration literature and Arctic studies The Death of Authentic Primitive Art Shelly Errington,2023-09-01 In this lucid witty and forceful book Shelly Errington argues that Primitive Art was invented as a new type of art object at the beginning of the twentieth century but that now at the century s end it has died a double but contradictory death Authenticity and primitivism both attacked by cultural critics have died as concepts At the same time the penetration of nation states the tourist industry and transnational corporations into regions that formerly produced these artifacts has severely reduced supplies of primitive art bringing about a second death Errington argues that the construction of the primitive in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and the kinds of objects chosen to exemplify it must be understood as a product of discourses of progress from the nineteenth century European narrative of technological progress to the twentieth century narrative of modernism to the late twentieth century narrative of the triumph of the free market In Part One she charts a provocative argument ranging through the worlds of museums art theorists mail order catalogs boutiques tourism and world events tracing a loosely historical account of the transformations of meanings of primitive art in this century In Part Two she explores an eclectic collection of public sites in Mexico and Indonesia a national museum of anthropology a cultural theme park an airport and a ninth century Buddhist monument newly refurbished to show how the idea of the primitive can be used in the interests of promoting nationalism and economic development Errington s dissection of discourses about progress and primitivism in the contemporary world is both a lively introduction to anthropological studies of art institutions and a dramatic new contribution to the growing field of cultural studies British Books ,1903 Publishers' Circular and Booksellers' Record of British and Foreign Literature ,1901 The Publishers' Circular and Booksellers' Record ,1929 Library Bulletin Somerville Public Library (Mass.),1907 Landsborough's Exploration of Australia from Carpentaria to Melbourne, with Especial Reference to the Settlement of Available Country William Landsborough,1866
