Pidgin And Creole Tense/mood/aspect Systems Creole Language Library Vol 6:

Pidgin and Creole Tense/Mood/Aspect Systems John Victor Singler, 1990-01-01 More than any other area of the grammar tense mood aspect TMA has provided evidence to fuel the ongoing debates about creole genesis and about the relevance of pidgin and creole phenomena to language theory more generally This volume advances the debate in two ways First it makes available in print for the first time and in its original form William Labov's On the Adequacy of Natural Languages I The Development of Tense Second the volume features detailed analyses of the TMA systems of seven diverse pidgins and creoles which vary in terms of their lexifying superstrate languages their location and their social histories With the authors employing a broad range of theoretical perspectives for their analyses the study demonstrates both the extent to which pidgins and creoles share a single prototypical TMA system and the degree to which individual pidgins and creoles diverge from that prototype This is a volume that brings forward our knowledge and understanding of pidgin and creole TMA The seven languages analyzed are Capeverdean Crioulo Kituba Papiamentu Berbice Dutch Haitian Creole Kru Pidgin English and Eighteenth Century Nigerian Pidgin English

Creoles, Their Substrates, and Language Typology Claire Lefebvre, 2011-01-01 Since creole languages draw their properties from both their substrate and superstrate sources the typological classification of creoles has long been a major issue for creolists typologists and linguists in general Several contradictory proposals have been put forward in the literature For example creole languages typologically pair with their superstrate languages Chaudenson 2003 with their substrate languages Lefebvre 1998 or even creole languages are alike Bickerton 1984 such that they constitute a definable typological class McWhorter 1998 This book contains 25 chapters bearing on detailed comparisons of some 30 creoles and their substrate languages As the substrate languages of these creoles are typologically different the detailed investigation of substrate features in the creoles leads to a particular answer to the question of how creoles should be classified typologically The bulk of the data show that creoles reproduce the typological features of their substrate languages This argues that creoles cannot be claimed to constitute a definable typological class

Creole Studies - Phylogenetic Approaches Peter Bakker, Finn Borchsenius, Carsten Levisen, Eeva M. Sippola, 2017-05-31 This book launches a new approach to creole studies founded on phylogenetic network analysis Phylogenetic approaches offer new visualisation techniques and insights into the relationships between creoles and non creoles creoles and other contact varieties and between creoles and lexifier languages With evidence from creole languages in Africa Asia the Americas and the Pacific the book provides new perspectives on creole typology cross creole comparisons and creole semantics The book offers an introduction for newcomers to the fields of creole studies and phylogenetic analysis Using these methods to analyse a variety of linguistic features both structural and semantic the book then turns to explore old and new questions and problems in creole studies Original case studies explore the differences and similarities between creoles and propose solutions to the problems of how to classify creoles and how they formed and developed The book provides a fascinating glimpse into the unity and heterogeneity of creoles and the areal influences on their development. It also provides metalinguistic discussions of the creole concept from different perspectives. Finally, the book reflects critically on the findings and methods and sets new agendas for future studies. Creole Studies has been written for a broad readership of scholars and students in the fields of contact linguistics, biolinguistics, sociolinguistics, language typology and semantics.

Pidgins and Creoles beyond Africa-Europe Encounters* Isabelle

Buchstaller, Anders Holmberg, Mohammad Almoaiy, 2014-01-15. Most of what we know about pidgin and creole languages is the result of research into contact languages that developed as a consequence of European expansion into Africa and the Caribbean. The narrow focus on European lexifier and West African substrate languages has resulted in insufficient investigation of other contact varieties. Even more perniciously, lesser known and often under described contact languages have not been taken into consideration when formulating supposedly general tendencies about the linguistic properties of contact languages. This volume aims to give a platform to research on the history, genesis and typology of a number of non European language based contact languages. A more encompassing and diverse data base will contribute to more accurate and comprehensive inventories of the typological features of contact languages.

Focus and Grammatical Relations in Creole Languages* Francis Byrne, Donald Winford, 1993-10-28.

The volume has as its topic not only the types of formal constructions and devices which creole languages syntactically utilize to achieve constituent focus but also in a much broader sense the many other phenomena and processes found in these languages which serve to highlight sentence level elements. The book is organized into five sections: 1. verb focus, predicate clefting and predicate doubling; 2. focus and anti focus; 3. focus and pronominals; 4. discourse patterning; 5. grammatical relations.

Haitian Creole Newspaper Reader* Kate

Howe, 1990. This reader follows the same basic format as others in the Newspaper Reader series published by Dunwoody Press, with the difference that most of the reading selections herein are transcriptions of radio broadcasts rather than newspaper articles. The book is intended to provide students of Haitian Creole who already have some knowledge of the language with further practice in reading on a wide variety of topics thus also increasing their familiarity with some aspects of Haitian life in the broadest sense. The texts vary in difficulty from elementary to advanced with the majority ranging from 2 to 3 on the US Government Interagency Language Roundtable scale. All the texts were originally produced by native Haitian Creole speakers for native Haitian Creole speakers. Those reading selections transcribed from radio broadcasts were recorded in Haiti between 7 and 25 November 1988. Three selections are samples of graffiti found in the slums of La Saline and one is a political slogan on a main street in the Pacot neighborhood of the capital. The remainder are articles or letters reproduced with the kind permission of the weekly newspaper Ha ti Progr s. Sokomoko: Popular Culture in East Africa, 2023-12-21. Matatu is a journal on African literatures and societies dedicated to interdisciplinary dialogue between literary and cultural studies, historiography, the social sciences and cultural anthropology. Matatu is animated by a lively interest in African culture and literature including the Afro Caribbean that moves beyond worn-out clichés of cultural authenticity and national liberation towards critical exploration of African modernities. The East African public transport vehicle from which Matatu takes its name is both a component and a symbol of these modernities. Based on Western technology, these days usually Japanese, it is a vigorously African institution. It is usually regarded with some anxiety by those travelling in it but is often enough the only means of transport available. It creates temporary communicative communities and provides a transient site for the exchange of news, storytelling and political debate. Matatu is firmly committed to supporting democratic change in Africa, to providing a forum for interchanges between African and European critical debates, to overcoming notions of absolute cultural, ethnic or religious alterity and to promoting transnational discussion on the future of African societies in a wider world. Matatu will be published as a journal as of 2016. All back volumes are still available in print. Creole Genesis, Attitudes and Discourse. John R. Rickford, Suzanne Romaine, 1999. This collection in honor of creolist Charlene Junko Sato (1951-1996) brings together contributions by leading specialists in pidgin/creole studies in three primary areas: Pidgin/Creole Genesis and Development, Attitudes and Education, and Creole Discourse and Literature. Phonological Variation in Rural Jamaican Schools Véronique Lacoste, 2012 This book investigates variation in the classroom speech of 7 year old children who are learning Standard Jamaican English as a second language variety in rural Jamaica. For sociolinguists and second language dialect researchers interested in the acquisition and use of sociolinguistic variables an important challenge is how to efficiently account for language learning mechanisms and use. To date this book is the first to offer an interdisciplinary look into phonological and phonetic variation observed in primary school in Jamaica that is from the perspective of classic variationist and quantitative sociolinguistics and a usage based model. Both frameworks function as explanatory for the children's learning of phonostylistic variation which they encounter in their immediate linguistic environment i.e. most often through their teachers' speech. This book is intended for sociolinguists interested in child language variation, linguists working on formal aspects of the languages of the Caribbean, applied linguists concerned with the teaching and learning of second language phonology and any researchers interested in applying variationist and quantitative methods to classroom second language learning
