K. Holeyvinsky, 2015-09-27 Success is the achievement of something desired planned or attempted It occurs when we add the right amount of cream and sugar to our coffee come across something interesting to watch or find the person we want to spend our life with Everyone has an idea of what success is or what it means to them But is success by itself enough Can something be paired with success creating a wonderful marriage of two important elements The answer is yes and the partner is fulfillment While sometimes confused with success fulfillment is more about purpose than achievement more about a sense of peace than accomplishment more about an inner contentment instead of a vehicle parked outside Without fulfillment we will always want more like a person with no stomach signals eating at a buffet Without fulfillment we will ask Is this all there is Without fulfillment there will be emotions and feelings of emptiness thoughts and musings that something is missing Simply put fulfillment is a level of immense satisfaction resulting from finding the purpose or reason that something or someone is here Fulfillment will easily make you feel fully alive and will cause one of those This is what life is about kinds of experiences Success does occur when we find the person we want to spend our life with but fulfillment happens when that person says Yes to our proposal It isn't difficult to find great books magazines or movies about success Entire industries have been built around success Not so for fulfillment Perhaps fulfillment is harder to grasp doesn't sell as well or even worse we are deluded into thinking that success is all that matters There could be many reasons for the obvious lack of excellent works detailing both success and fulfillment While this book does not claim to fill that void it does describe in detail the principles needed to experience both Remember success without fulfillment is empty and unsatisfying your goal must be both It would be a tragedy to spend your life working hard pursuing success only to arrive at the end feeling empty and discontented A principle is a fundamental truth which serves as a cornerstone for behavior or actions People who live by
