Privacy Act Linda D. Koontz,2003-11 The Privacy Act regulates how federal agencies may use the personal information that individuals supply when obtaining government services or fulfilling obligations for example applying for a small business loan or paying taxes The General Accounting Office GAO was asked to review among other things agency compliance with the Privacy Act related guidance from the office of Management Budget OMB GAO recommends that the Dir OMB take a number of steps aimed at improving agency compliance with the Privacy Act including overseeing monitoring agency actions reassessing the need for additional guidance to agencies raising agency awareness of the importance of the act Privacy Act U S Government Accountability Office (G,U. Koontz,2005-11 Data mining a technique for extracting knowledge from large volumes of data is being used increasingly by the gov t by the private sector Many fed data mining efforts involve the use of personal information which can originate from gov t sources as well as private sector organizations The federal government s increased use of data mining since the terrorist attacks of Sept 11 2001 has raised public congressional concerns This report describes the characteristics of 5 federal data mining efforts determines whether agencies are providing adequate privacy security protection for the information systems used in the efforts for individuals potentially affected by these data mining efforts Includes recommendations Charts tables Privacy Act United States. General Accounting Office,2003 The Privacy Act regulates how federal agencies may use the personal information that individuals supply when obtaining government services or fulfilling obligations for example applying for a small business loan or paying taxes GAO was asked to review among other things agency compliance with the Privacy Act and related guidance from the Office of Management and Budget OMB Based on responses from 25 selected agencies to GAO surveys compliance with Privacy Act requirements and OMB guidance is generally high in many areas but it is uneven across the federal government For example GAO used agency responses to estimate 100 percent compliance with the requirement to issue a rule explaining to the public why personal information is exempt from certain provisions of the act In contrast GAO estimates 71 percent compliance with the requirement that personal information should be complete accurate relevant and timely before it is disclosed to a nonfederal organization As a result of this uneven compliance the government cannot adequately assure the public that all legislated individual privacy rights are being protected Agency senior privacy officials acknowledge the uneven compliance but report a number of difficult implementation issues in a rapidly changing environment Of these issues privacy officials gave most importance to the need for further OMB leadership and guidance Although agencies are not generally dissatisfied with OMB s guidance on the Privacy Act they made specific suggestions regarding areas in which additional guidance is needed such as the act s application to electronic records Besides these gaps in guidance additional issues included the low agency priority given to implementing the act and insufficient employee training on the act If these implementation issues and the overall uneven compliance are not addressed the government will not be able to provide the public with sufficient assurance that all legislated individual privacy rights are adequately protected   Privacy in the hands of the government United States.
