Abstract

This study investigates the interaction between financial innovation, human capital development and economic growth in Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Nepal, and Bhutan for the period of 1981Q1–2016Q4 by applying Auto-regressive Distributed Lag (ARDL) and Granger-causality under error correction model (ECM). Our principal finding confirms long-run association among financial innovation, human capital development, and economic growth of selected South Asian countries. Also, we found both long-run and short-run elasticities from financial innovation and human capital development to economic growth is positive for each country. The study confirms that economic growth of sample countries would positively affect any development in financial innovation and increase in investment for human capital development in future. We also perform a Granger-causality test to investigate directional causality, and we found bidirectional causality between financial innovation and economic growth, and human capital development and economic growth both in short-run and long-run, thus, supporting the feedback hypothesis. The study comes with two recommendations; first, the government should encourage financial innovation in the financial system and formulate fiscal policy in favour of adaption and diffusion of financial innovation. Second, public investment in human capital development should continue and made necessary initiative towards ensuring better implementation of undertaken measures in the economy.

1 | INTRODUCTION

Economic performance across the countries vary due to determinants of growth differ from each other. Growth is directly linked with few determinants in all aspect such as investment in physical and human capital, foreign direct investment, financial development, inflation, and industrialization (Haouas & Yagoubi, 2005). Economic development theories persistently advocated essence of quality human resources and efficient financial sector for sustainable growth. Efficient financial sector and optimization of economic resources through human capital accumulation can ensure sustainable economic growth (Abubakar, Kassim, & Yusoff, 2015). Financial development assists growth by increasing of marginal productivity of capital and capital accumulation by encouraging

Contemporary Issues in Development Finance Joshua Yindenaba Abor,Charles Komla Delali Adjasi,Robert Lensink,2020-12-29 Contemporary Issues in Development Finance provides comprehensive and up to date coverage of theoretical and policy issues in development finance from both the domestic and the external finance perspectives and emphasizes addressing the gaps in financial markets. The chapters cover topical issues such as microfinance, private sector financing, aid, FDI, remittances, sovereign wealth, trade finance, and the sectoral financing of agricultural and infrastructural projects. Readers will acquire both breadth and depth of knowledge in critical and contemporary issues in development finance from a philosophical and yet pragmatic development impact approach. The text ensures this by carefully integrating the relevant theoretical underpinnings, empirical assessments, and practical policy issues into its analysis. The work is designed to be fully accessible to practitioners with only a limited theoretical economic background, allowing them to deeply engage with the book as useful reference material. Readers may find more advanced information and technical details provided in clear, concise boxes throughout the text. Finally, each chapter is fully supported by a set of review questions and by cases and examples from developing countries, particularly those in Africa. This book is a valuable resource for both development finance researchers and students taking courses in development finance, development economics, international finance, financial development policy, and economic policy management. Practitioners will find the development impact policy and conceptual analysis dimensions insightful, analysing and designing intervention strategies.

Global Outlook on Financing for Sustainable Development 2019: Time to Face the Challenge OECD, 2018-11-12. The financing for sustainable development agenda promises to bring together more actors than ever before from businesses, governments, philanthropists, and remitting households to address the world's most pressing problems and achieve the Sustainable Development Goals. Yet in spite of this, From Summits to Solutions Raj M. Desai, Hiroshi Kato, Homi Kharas, 2018-07-24. A positive agenda for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals by 2030. All 193 member nations of the United Nations agreed in September 2015 to adopt a set of seventeen Sustainable Development Goals to be achieved by 2030. Each of the goals in such areas as education and health care is laudable in and of itself, and governments and organizations are working hard on them. But so far, there is no overall positive agenda of what new things need to be done to ensure the goals are achieved across all nations. In a search of fresh approaches to the longstanding problems targeted by the Sustainable Development Goals, the Japan International Cooperation Agency and the Global Economy and Development program at Brookings mounted a collaborative research effort to advance implementation of Agenda 2030. This edited volume is the product of that effort. The book approaches the UN's goals through three broad lenses. The first considers new approaches to capturing value. Examples include Nigeria's first green bonds, practical methods to expand women's economic opportunities, benchmarking to reflect business contributions to achieving the goals, new incentives for investment in infrastructure, and educational systems that promote cross-sector problem solving. The second lens entails new approaches to targeting places, including oceans, rural areas, fast-growing developing cities, and the interlocking challenge of data systems, including geospatial information generated by satellites. The third lens focuses on updating governance broadly defined. Issues include how civil society can align with the SDG challenge, how an advanced economy like Canada can approach the goals at home and abroad what needs to be done to foster new approaches for managing the global commons and how can multilateral institutions for health and development finance evolve Financial Innovation in Retail and Corporate Banking Luisa Anderloni, David T. Llewellyn, Reinhard H. Schmidt, 2009-01-01 Discusses through a blend of theory and empirical research the processes of innovation and the diffusion of new financial instruments This book explores theoretical issues such as the relationship among financial innovation and market structure and the legal protection of financial innovation From Summits to Solutions Hiroshi Kato, Raj M.
