Rogues And Branding Irons:

Rogues and Branding Irons Jack Fitzgerald, 1987-01-01 Nominalism and Literary Discourse Hugo Keiper, Christoph Bode, Richard J. Utz, 1997

Influential accounts of European cultural history variously suggest that the rise of nominalism and its ultimate victory over realist orientations were highly implemental factors in the formation of Modern Europe since the later Middle Ages but particularly the Reformation. Quite probably this is a simplification of a state of affairs that is in fact more complex indeed ambiguous. However if there is any truth in such propositions which have after all been made by many prominent commentators such as Panofsky Heer Blumenberg Foucault Eco Kristeva we may no doubt assume that literary texts will have responded and in turn contributed in a variety of ways to these processes of cultural transformation. It seems of considerable interest therefore to take a close look at the complex precarious position which literature as basically a symbolic mode of signification held in the perennial struggles and discursive negotiations between the semiotic twin paradigms of nominalism and realism. This collection of essays many of them by leading scholars in the field is a first comprehensive attempt to tackle such issues by analyzing representative literary texts in terms of their underlying semiotic orientations specifically of nominalism but also by studying pertinent historical theoretical and discursive contexts of such developments in their relation to literary discourse. At the same time since literary nominalism and realism are conceived as fundamentally aesthetic phenomena instantiating a genuinely literary debate over universals consistent emphasis is placed on the discursive dimension of the texts scrutinized in an endeavour to re-orient and consolidate an emergent research paradigm which promises to open up entirely new perspectives for the study of literary semiotics as well as of aesthetics in general. Historical focus is provided by concentrating on the English situation in the era of transition from late medieval to early modern c. 1350-1650 but readers will also find contributions on Chr. de Troyes and Rabelais as well as on the aftermath of the earlier debates as exemplified in studies of Locke and post-modern critical altercations respectively which serve to point up the continuing relevance of the issues involved. A substantial introductory essay seeks to develop an overarching theoretical framework for the study of nominalism and literary discourse in addition to offering an in-depth exploration of the nominalism-realism complex in its relation to literature. An extensive bibliography and index are further features of interest to both specialists and general readers.
