Moxley,John R. Finch,2006-04-11 We live in a day and age in which many fields come together to define new ones and out of these newly defined areas come innovative practices and emergent ways of thinking The Sourcebook on Rehabilitation and Mental Health Practice documents one of these new fields one formed by the coalescence of rehabilitative and mental health services and employment Only recently have human service practitioners policy makers and administrators recognized that there is a growing synergy among these areas once separated by great gulfs of differences in culture perspectives and values and technologies It is not happenstance that rehabilitation mental health and employment are becoming increasingly integrated in contemporary human services There is considerable interest in work in contemporary society although different values and perspectives mediate this interest For people with disabilities an interest in work often comes from deep frustration from not having ready access to work and from not having enough of it to facilitate an acceptable quality of life or independent living Some people find work to be a source of problems that negatively affects their functioning They find the workplace stressful and unsupportive or they feel that work exacts too much from them reducing their quality of life and setting into motion numerous negative personal effects Beck 2000

Sexual Identities and Sexuality in Social Work Priscilla Dunk-West, 2016-04-01 Sexuality and sexual identity have been relatively marginalized areas in both social work education and practice However changes in policy and legislation in the UK and other countries over the past decade have brought discussions of sexuality into the mainstream public service agenda In social work and social care gay and lesbian citizenship rights have been explicitly recognised In the fields of adoption and fostering new regulations and guidance have helped improve and develop practice around assessment and intervention It remains the case however that sex is often perceived as a problem area within social work and social care discussed only in relation to sexually diverse communities or in the realm of dysfunction or pathology This collection aims to generate a more proactive and challenging discussion of sexuality and sexual identity in social work Its starting point is that sexuality is an essential aspect of individual identity that users must be able to express their sexuality and that it is essential for social workers to be able to respond and discuss sexual issues appropriately The contributions are informed by feminist research considering in particular the experiences of women working in and using social care services since the 1990s In addition to a consideration of the wider policy legislative and service providers perspectives the book includes reflective accounts as well as research led contributions offering a comprehensive and balanced account of this important field which aims to inform both theory and practice

Feminist Perspectives on Social Work and Human Sexuality Mary Valentich, James Gripton, 2016-06-10 First published in 1985 this ground breaking volume contributes to a largely neglected area of social work research theory and practice The collection of essays by internationally known social work educators and practitioners applies feminist perspectives to a wide range of issues influencing the social work profession and social work practice In doing so it demonstrates that a liberal feminist position is consistent with social work practice Nearly all the chapters focus on direct practice issues such as problems faced by women who have been sexually assaulted the lack of adequate health care provided to lesbians from traditional health care systems and sexist bias in sex therapy and family therapy models This book will be of interest to students and practitioners of social work
