China's India War, 1962: Looking Back to See the Future Air Commodore Jasjit Singh, 2013-03-15 A potential competition exists between India and China and there is also no doubt that China started the war Highlighting the mistakes made by India rather than empirically analysing the available data can be regarded as the primary causes for the confusion that exists today. Though complete details and evidence of the developments are available and documented, few of us have attempted to draw up a pragmatic and realist analysis. The consequences of that war have yet to die down entirely and are frequently raked up with issues on recent developments which are not widely dissimilar to those of 1962. China is a complex country. To understand this rapidly progressing nation is even more difficult. There are many perceptions on this country and many of them are formed on account of some international events and China's growing assertiveness. It may be far fetched to expect for a paradigm change in stance and motive which could give China an uncertain negotiating position. This edited volume provides the reader an excellent blend of the historical run up to the aberration, the military developments and consequences. It also provides useful material to understand the geographical boundary issues between India and China and developing Chinese strategies both on the political and military front.

Looking Back, Moving Forward Girish Daswani, 2015-02-26

How do Ghanaian Pentecostals resolve the contradictions of their own faith while remaining faithful to their religious identity? Bringing together the anthropology of Christianity and the anthropology of ethics, Girish Daswani's Looking Back Moving Forward investigates the compromises with the past that members of Ghana's Church of Pentecost make in order to remain committed Christians. Even as church members embrace the break with the past that comes from being born again, many are less concerned with the boundaries of Christian practice than with interpersonal questions: the continuity of suffering after conversion, the causes of unhealthy relationships, the changes brought about by migration and how to deal with them. By paying ethnographic attention to the embodied practices, interpersonal relationships and moments of self-reflection in the lives of members of the Church of Pentecost in Ghana and amongst the Ghanaian diaspora in London, Looking Back Moving Forward explores ethical practice as it emerges out of the questions that church members and other Ghanaian Pentecostals ask themselves.

This book investigates one aspect of the story of how our religiously oriented culture became a secular one. It concentrates on the conflicts enveloping the attitude to the past from the late seventeenth to the early twentieth century. The background argument is that the way the process of secularization occurred in one particular religious context the Roman Catholic one was determinative for the possibility of something such as secular culture and hence for both the modern secular attitude to the past and the modern religious one. In recent years a spate of scholarship has suggested that the expanded version of Weber's theory according to which modernity is a consequence of Protestantism is not quite accurate. Robert Merton modified this theory to argue that modern natural science originated in the context of seventeenth century Protestant England. Against this position many scholars have investigated origins for the development of science in Catholic countries. The development of natural science however is not the whole story of the development of modern secular culture even if the story of that development is restricted to the development of knowledge. Our modern universities are organized around the division between humanities and natural sciences and it can be thought that this process of modernization or secularization affected the humanities no less than the sciences.

Science Fiction and the Historical Novel Ian P. MacDonald, Kate Polak, 2024-09-16 If you woke to realize that you could rewrite your yesterday without knowing the kind of tomorrow it would grant you would you do it? Are the authors of our destiny working with an outline or spit-balling confusing plotlines? Since the past changes possible futures to what alighting butterfly should we pay the most heed? This book explores the liminal space between speculative fiction and the historical novel. Staged as a transnational multicultural conversation it takes up a call originally made by Fredric Jameson in Archaeologies of the Future wherein he describes that flashpoint between speculative and historical genres as the symptom of a mutation in our relationship to historical time itself. Drawing together postcolonial, feminist, cultural, Indigenous and cognitive approaches Science Fiction and the Historical Novel asks what the past can offer a future-oriented world and how the future can be imagined in relation to a past that seeks narratives of inevitability rather than possibility. Engaged with the idea of the past as a model for the future, authors in this volume probe the extent to which historical scripts delimit possibilities and how authors engaged with the practice of alternative pasts rewrite potentialities in the present.
