

PRINCIPLES OF LANDSCAPE GARDENING

Landscaping is an aesthetic branch of horticulture which deals with planting of ornamental plants in such a way that it creates a picturesque effect. Landscape gardening can also be defined as beautification of a piece of land, house or other object of interest on it. It is done with the view to create a natural scene by planting of lawns, trees, shrubs, flowering annuals, climbers, creepers, etc. Further, landscape gardening is both an art and science of the establishment of a ground in such a way that it gives the effect of natural landscape. It can also be defined as improving living environment for the people.

There are certain basic gardening principles that a designer should follow to achieve a garden that is pleasing to the senses and provides a pleasant outdoor living space. Landscaping is making pictures with plant materials and hence, its principles are same as those of art. Therefore, understanding of such principles will help in using them properly. They are as follows:

1. Simplicity - simple lines, forms and functional designs are always more interesting than complex, hard to digest designs which do not allow proper focus of attention. It includes giving less emphasis to separate elements than mass elements. Fussy lines be replaced with gently curved or straight lines use of minimum garden components and maintenance-free materials.

(b)

Fig. Even though both the photographs have lots of colour, (a) is pleasing to the eyes and mind while (b) creates uneasiness and seems chaotic

Simplicity does not mean a dull design but it means a subtle combination of ingredients to create appeal.
