Principles Of Post Secondary Vocational Education:

Principles of Post-secondary Vocational Education Angelo Christopher Gilli, 1973 Resources in Education, 2000-10 OECD Reviews of Vocational Education and Training Higher Technical Education in England, United Kingdom Insights from Selected International Experience OECD, 2024-12-19 A system of higher level vocational courses can equip young people and adults with the advanced skills that employers are looking for in modern and dynamic labour markets In England United Kingdom these courses are collectively known as Higher Technical Education HTE classified at level 5 in the International Standard Classification of Education ISCED In recent years English HTE has struggled with its identity scope and esteem as previous attention brought academic higher education to the masses This report supports ongoing reform efforts by comparing England's HTE system with successful models in Austria Canada Ontario Denmark France and Sweden It underlines the importance of a coherent educational vision supported by quality governance and strong employer engagement Flexible and responsive educational programmes delivered by providers with a clear objective on HTE are essential By learning from these countries England can create a robust policy framework and foster collaborations to ensure the success of its HTE reforms

Resources in Vocational Education, 1980 Vocational and Occupational Education United States. Congress. House. Committee on Education and Labor. Subcommittee on Elementary, Secondary, and Vocational Education, 1975 Research in Education, 1973 Modern Organizations of Vocational Education Angelo Christopher Gilli, 1976 Leaders in vocational education according to this book combine the fundamentals of their subject with elements of organization theory and concepts of leadership These blended principles of successful vocational education are examined in Part I The ten components of the vocational education delivery system are analyzed in Part II in the light of principles developed in Part I Academic institutions public and private from secondary schools to universities are considered as are industrial training and governmental manpower programs The unique aspects of each kind of organization are analyzed qualitatively and quantitatively in terms of student enrollments graduates careers faculties curriculums governance financing and relations with the community Four developments in vocational education receive special attention First is the universal college concept which delays the specialized portion of a student's vocational training until he or she has accepted a specific job Second is the dual delivery system which gives as much emphasis to adult and continuing education as to the preparation of neophyte workers funding via such revenue sharing devices as those of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 are important here Third is the shift in governance from state and local to regional units a harbinger of this trend is the prime sponsor concept embodied in the CETA of 1973 Fourth is the growth of post secondary vocational education largely via area vocational schools and community junior colleges Part III examines where vocational education is advocates what it could be and predicts what it likely will be in 1980 and beyond Dr Gilli's ideal model starts with the identification of clusterable personal goals among students employs personalized teaching to identified occupational families and their characteristics and utilizes skill centers to impart contracted for skills from both academic and vocational subject matter His forecast is guardedly optimistic foreseeing neither a boom nor a bust in vocational education he recommends substantial changes as a hedge against inflated criticism University of Pennsylvania Bulletin University of Pennsylvania,1964 Vocational Education Amendments of 1974 United States.
