subject Transnational Fugitive Offenders in International Law Geoff Gilbert, 1998-07-14 International Criminal Law has undergone significant recent changes Transnational Fugitive Offenders reflects the dynamic nature of the subject keeps readers on the cutting edge of new developments An ever increasing number variety of international agreements cases has expanded extradition law The jurisprudence relating to alternative means of rendition has also evolved in different ways in different jurisdictions Most notably however the remit of the subject as a whole has expanded The concept of international criminal law now has to embrace crimes that occur in no single place cross border financial crimes where vast sums of money exist solely in cyberspace which have connections with financial institutions in several countries The international community has also established supra national criminal courts to deal with the aftermath of the wars in the former Yugoslavia Rwanda The future will likely bring further changes as well The permanent International Criminal Court originally proposed by the International Law Commission if established by the international community would as matters stand in 1998 have jurisdiction over genocide crimes against humanity war crimes The ultimate result may at last be the availability of overarching guidance as to the remit scope of international criminal law Those studying extradition law and or working with transnational fugitive offenders in any capacity will find Transnational Fugitive Offenders an important thought provoking work on a very dynamic subject Just Prisons Tom Daems, Elena Larrauri, 2024-11-25 This edited book explores how requests and complaints by prisoners are being dealt with by prison governors administrations or independent bodies such as complaint commissions in different parts of Europe It asks who complains and why How are complaints from prisoners being dealt with from a legal and empirical point of view How do procedures work and can they be considered effective Should administrative procedures be exhausted before appealing to a judge It explores whether such systems comply with international regulation such as the European Prison Rules the UN Mandela Rules or the case law of the ECtHR It speaks to academics NGOs and lawyers with an interest in prison law human rights bodies and prison monitoring bodies A Guide to Prisons and Penal Policy Rachel Vipond, 2023-04-25 This concise and accessible guide offers a critical overview of the prison system in England and Wales for students and practitioners Responding to International Crime Geoff Gilbert, 2006 Following the wars in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda and the events of 11 September 2001 awareness of international crimes has come to the forefront of public consciousness The very public responses seen in the establishment by the Security Council of the ad hoc tribunals and the international community coming together to create the International Criminal Court have done much to promote the idea that there should be no impunity for international criminals Nevertheless while those are incredibly significant steps in the attempt to combat international crime there is no way due to their jurisdictional competence that such bodies could ever hope to address all the various crimes that are committed that are not confined to a single domestic jurisdiction either by reason of their nature or trans border factors As such the response of the international community to international crime depends as much on extraterritorial criminal jurisdiction mutual legal assistance agreements extradition and other means of lawful rendition Furthermore given the fundamental rule that a person is innocent until proven guilty and that everyone within the jurisdiction of a State is owed certain basic minimum human rights guarantees responses to international crime cannot be without limitation Respect for the alleged transnational fugitive offender is as important a factor in responding to international crime as preventing impunity for genocide crimes against humanity war crimes and gross human rights violations
