BEHAVIOR

Characteristic for these early ID. 1166 demonstrates an acute lack of higher cognitive function. Complex reasoning, speech, problem solving, and greater introspection all appear either severely limited or altogether nonfunctional. Physically, it's what it needs to be. Strong Right Left. And yet I'd hoped for a greater mind behind it.

However, 1166 displays an odd sense of loyalty to a select few security staff, who nauseatingly feel some kind of sympathy for it, indicative of domesticated dogs and cats. This means it will can be kept. It feels. It perceives.

I believe this is our first sign of progression. That our processes, while admittedly still rudimentary, are showing us where more work need be done, and that improvements still possible. Still, 1166, ~~██████████~~ is an odd, funny little creature. The way it sits in the corner and watches ~~██████████~~ ~~██████████~~ was taken seriously. I got a good laugh out of it. It amuses me.

CONCLUSION

I'm going to isolate it. It'll have contact with no one but me. Considering my importance to the project, it's doubly important that I'm properly protected at all times. And besides, I might get a good laugh or two at the pathetic little sounds it makes.

By the time I'm done with it, I'll be its entire world.

It'll know nothing else.
