Brooks-Senftleben, 1993 Focuses on the period 1982 to mid 1992 and looks briefly at the prospects for continued foreign investment in the late 1990s The Columbia Encyclopedia William Bridgwater, Elizabeth J. Sherwood, 1960 Emerging Capital Markets and Globalization Augusto de la Torre, Sergio Schmukler, 2006-10-20 Back in the early 1990s economists and policy makers had high expectations about the prospects for domestic capital market development in emerging economies particularly in Latin America Unfortunately they are now faced with disheartening results Stock and bond markets remain illiquid and segmented Debt is concentrated at the short end of the maturity spectrum and denominated in foreign currency exposing countries to maturity and currency risk Capital markets in Latin America look particularly underdeveloped when considering the many efforts undertaken to improve the macroeconomic environment and to reform the institutions believed to foster capital market development The disappointing performance has made conventional policy recommendations questionable at best Emerging Capital Markets and Globalization analyzes where we stand and where we are heading on capital market development First it takes stock of the state and evolution of Latin American capital markets and related reforms over time and relative to other countries Second it analyzes the factors related to the development of capital markets with particular interest on measuring the impact of reforms And third in light of this analysis it discusses the prospects for capital market development in Latin America and emerging economies and the implications for the reform agenda Capital Flows to Latin America : is There Evidence of Contagion Effects? : Paper Presented at the Conference on Private Capital Flows to Emerging Markets After the Mexican Crisis, Vienna, September 7-9, 1995 Sara Calvo, 1995 Volatile Capital Flows Ricardo Hausmann, Liliana Rojas-Suárez, 1996 Capital Flows to Latin America and the Caribbean: First Eight Months of 2022 NU. CEPAL., Against a backdrop of tightening global financing conditions total Latin American and Caribbean bond issuance in international markets in the first eight months of 2022 was down more than 50% from the same period in 2021 International bond issuance of environmental social and governance ESG bonds including green social sustainability and sustainability linked bonds from the region also slowed in the first eight months of 2022 albeit less markedly than total issuance The share of these bonds in the region's total issuance increased to 34% from 31% in the year earlier period Capital Flows to Latin America and the Caribbean the first eight months of 2022 presents and analyses the developments concerning capital flows to Latin America and the Caribbean from January to August 2022 This report is published three times a year and provides an overview of new international bonds from Latin American and Caribbean issuers including green social sustainability and sustainability linked bonds as well as of bond spreads and credit ratings

Private Equity and Financial Development in Latin America Ignacio Puente, 2022-02-01 Shallow capital markets are a key bottleneck for private sector development in Latin America Still there is not a large literature on capital markets and corporate governance or on the politics of regulatory reform and business associations focused on this region To help address this gap this new book introduces private equity into the financial development debate through a Latin American lens The author looks at the cases of Brazil Mexico Chile Colombia and Argentina And proposes a shift in the financial development discussion from institutional explanations focused only on rules to an actor based argument centered on the role of institutional investors in particular pension funds

Venture Capital Investing in Latin America: Policy and Flows Brian Logan Beirne, 2020-11-03 Latin America is mainly a puzzle 2 This description adeptly summarizes economists and policymakers consensus understanding of the region's economy Latin America possesses relatively high wealth literacy rates and urbanization but nevertheless does not generate lots of good jobs or good growth 3 In fact over the last 25 years the Latin American economy grew at half the rate than during 1950-1980 with per capita income barely increasing and poverty persisting 4 To varying degrees the Latin American governments have sought foreign capital as an answer to their economic woes and unleashed just about every conceivable economic reform on their countries in this era of globalization 5 Nevertheless the fruits of these reforms have been slow to arrive and small in number 6 This Article analyzes one component of this enigma promotion of venture capital investing In doing so this study advances the understanding of one of the region's economic policy initiatives that possesses the possibility for profound implications for Latin America's economic and societal wellbeing Improved understanding of venture capital VC investing in Latin America may lead to new policies for promoting the economic health of the region Venture capital investments provide the needed cash for companies to develop technologies and products which in turn generate jobs exports and taxes that keep the the region competitive 7 In recent years in the world's most established venture capital market venture backed companies employed more than 10 million and generated over 1.8 trillion in sales per year 8 Venture capital is viewed as highly beneficial to economies because of the unique nature of its investing activity Even during the downturn in the markets from 2000 2003 in the United States employment in venture backed companies jumped by 6.5 percent while national private sector employment shrank by 2.3 percent. 9 Aside from these employment prospects within venture backed firms VC investing has additional positive externalities. VC backed firms consistently breed increased productivity and technological development across the industries in which they operate. 10 The governments of Latin America are eager to duplicate such successes. Indeed LAC countries have pursued promising legislation and targeted programs aimed at bolstering the private equity and venture capital industry. 11 Despite their efforts however not all countries are able to allocate private equity to risky high value added undertakings. Barriers act to constrain the development of a dynamic venture capital market and business environment. 12 The purpose of this study is to explore the functioning of venture capital investing in Latin America. While Latin American governments recognize the economic benefits of attracting VC financing much of the region has struggled. On the supply side this may be due to a lack of funds risk adverse attitudes and or the absence of an equity investment culture. 13 Focusing on Argentina Brazil Chile and Mexico this analysis pulls together existing literature to evaluate the attractiveness of each country's legal environment with regard to foreign venture capital investment. This Article then advances current scholarship by uncovering an unintuitive lack of correlation between the literature's determination of a country's objective attractiveness and actual venture capital investment. This phenomenon is mirrored and the enigma reinforced by a similar lack of correlation between general foreign direct investment and venture capital investing. This study then analyzes this finding in the context of general VC investment theory.
