

Life-Cycle

Your heart jolts with unwrapped joy
Like it's the unexpected last date
Of leapyear

You live thousands of life
On the edge of that one beat
All your stars in every mouth
They just intone again
Your old suffocated poetries
Inside torned sombre
That silent floor
Twirls at your feet
Comatose golden time awake
By that pinch of papers

//Your wall has to leave its bulwark
Or it wears a new paint breathe a
Whole breath, both notes of pain
And felicity make you alive//

Your throat can't swallow that second
Like on the bright unheard night
Of heart-quakes
You die millions of deaths
As your lips love the taste of worse
Nightmares more than
Well versed poetry of well being
Drowned sea-shore
Amidst two toes
Of your naked sea
Your path to destination
Start to hobble
All you see is blurred world
With your blunted senses

//You live these days by seeing
Those lived happy days before
Your orbs with hope that not that
Time but days like that time will
Wishper again//

Poetic inquiry has increased in prominence as a legitimate means by which to collect, assimilate, analyze, and share the results of research across many disciplines. With this collection, we hope to continue to lay the groundwork internationally for researchers, scholars, graduate students, and the larger community to take up poetic inquiry as a way to approach knowledge, generation, learning, and sharing. This volume specifically works to draw attention to the ancient connection between poetry and the natural world, with attention to broadening the ecological scope and impact of the work of poetic inquirers.
