Trade, Development, and Social Justice Raj Bhala, 2003 Trade Development and Social Justice examines the greatest challenge currently facing the global trading system the large and growing divide between the First World and the Third World This schism threatens to tear apart the GATT WTO system Eclectic in both its theme and methodology Trade and Development positions itself as a moderate book in both substance and tone In a world of loud and sometimes violent protests about globalization and its effects on poor countries this book offers a reasoned and empathetic approach Using five arguments Marxist Origins Capitalist Growth Models Organizing Trade Rules Special and Differential Treatment Rules and Trade Rules and Social Justice this text advances the thesis that international trade law neither is as unjust toward poor countries as critics of the GATT and WTO claim nor is the law as just toward them as GATT WTO defenders contend Bhala uses tools from economic development theory specifically from the Marxist Leninist critique of trade and from the capitalist models of economic growth constructed by leading economists The book also uses tools from theology specifically Catholic and Islamic concepts and principles of social justice Additionally Trade Development and Social Justice proposes specific improvements to make international trade law more socially just This book is part of the Studies on Globalization and Society Series edited by Raj Bhala Rice Distinguished Professor The University of Kansas School of Law This particular assessment is a long overdue analysis of how many participants view the entrenched framework for modern international trade For anyone seeking balance this work is a venerable presentation of how nations talk past each other in the supposed world trade dialogue between the Haves and Have Nots American Society of International Law Newsletter March 2004

Do South-South Trade Agreements Enhance Member Countries' Trade? Evaluating Implications for Development Potentials in the Context of SAARC. Swapan K. Bhattacharya, Gouranga Gopal Das, 2013 The South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation SAARC is the least integrated economy in the Asia Pacific region whose intraregional trade was only 5.6 per cent in 2006 In order to estimate potential trade of the SAARC Member Countries SMCs we have estimated behind the border and beyond the border constraints which both appear to be quite significant in all SMCs Given the level of beyond the border constraints in the absence of full information on all behind the border constraints the combined effect of the latter on actual exports of individual SAARC country is modeled in the gravity equation which is estimated using the methods suggested in the literature for estimating stochastic frontier production function Results of the stochastic frontier gravity model show that when FTA among SAARC countries becomes fully operational smaller members will gain maximum benefits compared to larger members The paper also analyses the synergy between trade and development goals of the SAARC countries Since tariffs are not an important barrier in this region emphasis should be given to liberalization of investment flows higher technology cooperation and cooperation in areas of education literacy basic health care gender bias favorable institutions ensuring good governance social capital transparency transportation costs infrastructure to achieve the SAARC development goals SDGs

Regional Integration, Economic Development and Global Governance Ulrich Volz, 2011 This book explores a central issue of the world economy today the role of regional integration for economic development and global governance The importance of this issue comes from the fact that the globalisation process that we have been experiencing in recent decades is also a process of open regionalism To what extent does this process contribute to development The reader will find many interesting answers to this question in the book which is an outstanding contribution to this debate I welcome its publication and look forward to its influence on global debates on the relations between regional integration development and global governance From the foreword by Jos Antonio Ocampo Columbia University US The contributors expertly provide a comparative perspective on regional integration in different regions of the world while at the same time analysing the various facets of integration relating to trade FDI finance and monetary policies They provide a comprehensive treatment of the subject and offer new perspectives on the potential developmental effects of regional integration and the implications of regional integration for global economic governance Whilst highlighting and illustrating the potential benefits deriving from regional economic integration the book also stresses the problems and challenges regional integration processes are usually confronted with
