and Attitudinal Outcomes of a Sexual Harassment Training Program Corinne Marjorie Anton, 2014 Sexual harassment has been recognized as a prevalent issue leading to multiple negative consequences for victims and perpetrators. Efforts to reduce its occurrence and increase awareness are important. The majority of sexual harassment prevention programs evaluated have used knowledge enhancing techniques in order to combat sexual harassment; however, results have not yielded a decrease in sexual harassment supportive attitudes. This study examined the effects of a sexual harassment training program that incorporated aspects of the elaboration likelihood model (Petty & Cacioppo, 1986) via manipulation of argument strength and source expertise. A pretest established participants' sexual harassment policy knowledge and attitudes. One hundred and fifty-four participants were randomly assigned to view one of four training videos where the strength of the arguments (weak, strong) and source expertise (non-expert, expert) were manipulated. Participants then completed a posttest of sexual harassment policy knowledge and attitudes. Participants also listed arguments against sexual harassment recalled from the training video and indicated their level of motivation to attend to the video, ability to understand the information presented in the video, and their favorable thoughts regarding the video's content. Results suggest that all participants evidenced an increase in knowledge of university sexual harassment policies from pretest to posttest, but changes in attitude were not significant. Participants who viewed weak arguments from a non-expert source evidenced greater recall of arguments presented in training videos compared to all other training videos. Women evidenced less supportive attitudes towards sexual harassment and more motivation to attend to and process the information presented in the videos compared to men. This study provided data on the applicability of the elaboration likelihood model to sexual harassment training programs, supporting previous research findings that training can enhance sexual harassment knowledge and immediate recall of information learned. The sexual harassment training program implemented in this study successfully enhanced sexual harassment policy knowledge in men and women using experts and non-expert sources conveying general and detailed information on the policies. However, the training program was not successful at changing participants' attitudes towards sexual harassment. Interpretations and implications of the results, as well as future directions and limitations, are discussed.

Conceptualizing Sexual Harassment as Discursive Practice Shereen G. Bingham, 1994-08-30 This is an interdisciplinary approach to sexual harassment that examines the meaning of concepts such as discourse, power, ideology, sexuality, and abuse. The essays explore discursive practice as a way of understanding sexual harassment: how it is normalized and sustained, how it may be contested and challenged, and how it may be studied. In giving voice to discursive frameworks and encouraging debate among authors with differing ideas, Bingham provides readers with a rich array of viewpoints and readings to consider.

in their own thinking about sexual harassment both as a social practice and as a topic of research Rather than attempting to provide resolution or draw conclusions this volume challenges scholars to begin the process of re forming conceptual perspectives for sexual harassment research and activism Although questioning our understandings of sexual harassment and discursiveness is unsettling and difficult it is necessary in order to instigate change in both ourselves as social actors and in our research of human behavior Sexual Harassment in Communications Julie L.
