The novel covers one year of the lives of Cecile Auclair and her father Euclide, French colonists in Quebec. Like many of Cather's books, the story is driven by detailed portraits of the characters rather than a narrative plot. Book I: The Apothecary The story opens in 1697 in Quebec. Euclide Auclair stands on Cap Diamant overlooking the river, watching as the last ship of the season returns to France. He comes down to dinner with his daughter Cecile. After dinner, Cecile feeds Blinker, a partially disabled hired man who does some of the heavy chores. Euclide Auclair came to the Quebec colony eight years prior in the service of Count de Frontenac as physician and apothecary. His wife has died after an illness, and the duties of housekeeping have devolved upon his daughter Cecile. The following day, Cecile and Euclide attend to Reverend Mother Juschereau, who has sprained her ankle. Her father replenishes the hospital supplies while Mother Juschereau tells Cecile a story. Book II: Cécile and Jacques On market day in late October, Euclide goes to buy vegetables to store in his root cellar. A description is given of citizens growing lettuce and root vegetables in cold frames in their cellars during the long winter. He goes to the church to say a prayer and notices Jacques, the son of a dissolute woman, also saying his prayers. Cecile goes to Governor Frontenac to ask for a pair of shoes for Jacques. He praises her for her charity and industry and asks if she would like anything for herself. She asks to look at his bowl of glass fruit, and he reminisces about his experiences in Turkey where the glass was made. Book III: The Long Winter The young Bishop Saint Vallier calls at Auclair's shop for sugared fruit. We learn that Bishop Saint Vallier has undone the system of education and parish management instituted over twenty years by Bishop Laval. Euclide does not like the young bishop because of his extravagant way of life, his snubbing of the older bishop, and because he believes Saint Vallier makes poor decisions Euclide derides him a less like a churchman than a courtier Book IV Pierre Charron In June a fur trader named Pierre Charron calls on Euclide He tells many stories to Euclide and C cile and accompanies C cile on a visit to friends on the le d Orl ans Book V The ships from France With many of their fellow townsfolk C cile and Jacques go down to the harbor to watch as five ships arrive from France There is a general celebration C cile receives packages from her two French aunts containing clothing and jewelry C cile is scheduled to return to France when the ships leave at the end of summer but is having reservations She tells her father that she is concerned about who will look after her friend Jacques Her father takes no notice and she is quite upset She goes to the church to pray and runs into Bishop Laval to whom she relates her troubles Book VI The Dying Count The Count learns that despite his expectations he is not being recalled to France He tells Euclide that he is released from his service and may return to France but Euclide chooses to remain The Count tells Euclide that he is dying and directs him to take the bowl of glass fruit to C cile as a gift Some time later the Count passes away The two bishops resolve their differences

Shadows on the Rock Willa Cather,2024-11-24 This tale was published in 1931 Willa Cather s Shadows on the Rock tells the tale of a young girl her widower father and their friends all of them working to make a life for themselves in Quebec in 1697 Shadows on the Rock is a historical novel which takes place between 1697 and 1713 in Quebec For a number of years after the French first settled Quebec it was an isolated rocky settlement where many of the inhabitants struggled to survive in the harsh climate The people tightly clung to the Catholic Church s interpretation of events and distrusted anyone who differed in this world view Frequent prayer and church services were the rule Chapter I One afternoon late in October of the year 1697 Euclide Auclair the philosopher apothecary of Quebec stood on the top of Cap Diamant gazing down the broad empty river far beneath him Empty because an hour ago the flash of retreating sails had disappeared behind the green island that splits the St Lawrence below Quebec and the last of the summer ships from France had started on her long voyage home As long as La Bonne Esp rance was still in sight many of Auclair s friends and neighbours had kept him company on the hill top but when the last tip of white slid behind the curving shore they went back to their shops and their kitchens to face the stern realities of life Now for eight months the French colony on this rock in the North would be entirely cut off from Europe from the world This was October not a sail would come up that wide waterway before next July No supplies not a cask of wine or a sack of flour no gunpowder or leather or cloth or iron tools Not a letter even no news of what went on at home There might be new wars floods conflagrations epidemics but the colonists would never know of them until next summer People sometimes said that if King Louis died the Minister would send word by the English ships that came to New York all winter and the Dutch traders at Fort Orange would dispatch couriers to Montreal
