The Artist's Mount Desert John Wilmerding, 1995-05 In a panoramic narrative John Wilmerding has brought together individual studies of the artists who painted Mount Desert Island off the Maine coast in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries Wilmerding demonstrates that Mount Desert has had an enduring appeal for artists and visitors much like other great sites of national geography such as Yosemite Yellowstone and Niagara Falls This coastal region of the northeast captured the imaginations of several generations of American painters and each generation attached its own meaning to the island These changing meanings reveal both the history of American landscape painting as well as cultural concerns of each era As Wilmerding states Part of the island's continuing allure is that a fixed point of geography can inspire such diverse visual responses and stylistic treatments as the romantic realism of the early Hudson River painters the crystalline luminism of artists in the middle of the nineteenth century the variants of Impressionism practiced at century's end and the new modes of representation in the twentieth approaching aspects of abstraction The figures most central to this chronology are the pioneers Thomas Doughty Alvan Fisher and Thomas Cole who generalized and romanticized nature in their visits of the 1830s and 1840s Fitz Hugh Lane in the 1850s and Frederic Edwin Church in the 1850s and 1860s Each drew and painted extensively at Mount Desert In particular they recorded the northern sunsets in forms that made Americans give serious thought to the significance of their country's geography and its destiny Other artists among them William Stanley Haseltine Sanford Gifford John Marin Marsden Hartley and more recently Richard Estes continued to come to Mount Desert and to find in its light air and rock formations the kind of scenery that inspired a rich diversity of visual expressions

Desert Roslynn D. Haynes, 2013-11-15 Sand Cacti Lizards Mirages Deserts call to mind exotic places a sense of adventure and freedom but also thirst and desolation In Desert Roslynn D Haynes takes a fresh look at this geographical feature and cultural entity as it becomes an increasingly threatened environment Considering the immense geographical diversity of deserts from the Sahara to Antarctica Haynes explores the intriguing and often bizarre ways plants and animals adapt to such a hostile environment as well as the diverse peoples that have inhabited deserts and evolved unique lifestyles and cultures in response to their surroundings She asks why Judaism Christianity and Islam all originated in the deserts of the Middle East and traces the connections between the minimalism of desert existence and the pursuit of a spiritual dimension Finally she describes the allure deserts have exerted on the West the significance of desolate landscapes in literature and film and the revolution in artists' responses to the desert as an empty space and as an inspiration for new visual techniques with which to view it Ending with a look at how commercial and military interests threaten desert ecologies Desert casts new light on our view of these seemingly barren places
