Racing Research, Researching Race France Winddance Twine, Jonathan Warren, 2000 This book is an examination of what it means to be conscious of race when one is doing research There are those who argue that just to acknowledge race is to perpetuate the biological myth of race But this book warns that is to confuse the biological with the social further arguing that the race of the researcher can be a significant factor in what information is revealed by interviewees and that this needs to be considered when planning a study or reviewing its results This book is the authors attempt to initiate a serious discussion of the potential ethical emotional analytical and methodological dilemmas generated by racial subjectivities racial ideologies and racial disparities in research

Researching 'Race' and Ethnicity Yasmin Gunaratnam, 2003-08-07 Gunaratnam's framework is rich in its examination and synthesis of approaches to the study of race the reward for the reader who does pick up the book is that the author deftly articulates the complicated view of research on race first from the quantitative perspective and then skilfully moves the reader to issues of race in qualitative research Studies in Ethnicity and Nationalism This is a welcome book for those engaged in policy and empirical work with an active research agenda there is a level of theoretical sophistication in the text which is often missing from texts concerned with methods in this area Race Relations Abstracts The particular value of this book to readers lies in the discussion of race ethnicity and research issues within a political and social context The author states her intention to explore some of the theoretical and practical dilemmas of researching race and ethnicity This is without question achieved I recommend it as essential reading for those concerned with increasing their awareness of issues relating to race ethnicity and research practice Nurse Researcher This is a thought provoking and challenging book which demonstrated the fractured and fluid nature of difference and power in the research process Importantly it offers a guide to the ways in which research can be effectively and productively used in challenging the status quo Diversity in Health and Social Care Researching Race and Ethnicity provides an innovative discussion of the methodological epistemological and ethical challenges of doing qualitative research that is informed by questions of race ethnicity and social difference By identifying and challenging categorical thinking and many longstanding assumptions about the meanings of race and ethnicity the author gets to the heart of many of the everyday dilemmas and difficulties that researchers confront in the field but are rarely theorised or openly discussed Yasmin Gunaratnam's insistence that race and ethnicity are a significant part of all qualitative research and are not the specialist concerns of those whose work is explicitly focussed upon race provokes a radical rethinking of current methodological debates How do racial and ethnic categories inform our approaches to research How does the racialised identity of the researcher and the research participants affect the research interaction and the knowledge that we produce What are the assumptions that are made about racialised subjectivity and inter subjectivity How can we make sense of accounts in which race and ethnicity are silent or are non manifest How can we work ethically across difference In examining these and other questions the wide ranging discussions in the book are animated by examples drawn from the author s ethnographic research with white and minoritized research participants Through these examples readers will be able to engage with some of the complexities of research relationships power relations and ethical concerns about engagement disconnection and complicity in research The attention that the book gives to the excluded experiences of minoritized researchers will be of particular value to many readers Researching Race and Ethnicity is essential reading for students and academics in the social sciences

Condition or Process? Researching Race in Education Adrienne D. Dixon, Gloria J. Ladson-Billings, Cecilia E. Suarez, William T. Trent, James D. Anderson, 2021-01-18 The question of why we need to think about how we research race demands a conceptualization of race that captures both its social construction and its temporal evolution We need both an understanding of race and clarity about how we talk about it in our design and conduct of research and in how we interpret and apply it in our findings As a field we can use research on race and racism in education to help construct social change Our purpose with this volume is to underscore the persistence of the discriminatory actions processes and the normalization of the use of race and class conditions to justify the existing and growing disparity between the quality of life and opportunity for middle class and more affluent Whites and that for people of color and people of color who live in poverty As editors of this volume we wonder what more we could learn and understand about the process and condition of race if we dare to ask bold questions about race and racism and commit to methods and analyses that respect the experiences and knowledges of our research participants and partners

Researching Race in Education Adrienne D. Dixon, 2014-06-01 In traditional educational research race is treated as merely a variable In 1995 Gloria Ladson Billings and William F Tate IV argued that race is under theorized in education and called for educational researchers to pay closer attention to the relationship between race and educational inequity Ladson Billings and Tate 1995 In particular they argued drawing on legal scholar Derrick Bell s notion of Racial Realism Bell 1995 that racialized inequities are not accidental or aberrant rather racialized educational inequities are the result of particular and specific policies and practices that are designed to maintain particular forms of dominance and marginalization More specifically Bell and later Ladson Billings and Tate argue that racial inequity persists despite liberal policies and legislation that were ostensibly designed to eradicate it The Racial Realist perspective takes into the consideration the longevity and history of racism racial inequity and White supremacy in the U S and serves as a mirror to reflect back the limitations of proposed policies and legislation that fail to address those issues In this way Critical Race Theory and the scholars who draw on CRT view our work as an important check and balance in the effort toward racial equality scholarship on the far right rarely delves explicitly and critically into the ethics of research This book seeks to remedy this significant gap in an otherwise extensive and growing literature Originating from a workshop series in 2020 in which an international group of academics at various career stages shared the ethical challenges and best practices they had developed in their research this edited collection draws together insights from these ongoing conversations offering urgent critical reflections on key ethical issues

Critical Issues in Anti-racist Research Methodologies George Jerry Sefa Dei, Gurpreet Singh Johal, 2005 Anti racism studies have blossomed over the years with scholarship and political work reinforcing each other to cement anti racist change But how do we understand anti racist research How is anti racist research methodology different from other methods of research investigation What are the principles of anti racism research This edited collection attempts to provide some answers by bringing together works that examine the perils and desires of anti racist research with a particular focus on the notion of difference and a serious consideration of the race gender class and sexuality intersections implications of educational research
