Gibson, Krister Andersson, The late Elinor Ostrom, Sujai Shivakumar, 2005-09-08 What's wrong with foreign aid Many policymakers aid practitioners and scholars have called into question its ability to increase economic growth alleviate poverty or promote social development At the macro level only tenuous links between development aid and improved living conditions have been found At the micro level only a few programs outlast donor support and even fewer appear to achieve lasting improvements The authors of this book argue that much of aid's failure is related to the institutions that structure its delivery These institutions govern the complex relationships between the main actors in the aid delivery system and often generate a series of perverse incentives that promote inefficient and unsustainable outcomes In their analysis the authors apply the theoretical insights of the new institutional economics to several settings First they investigate the institutions of Sida the Swedish aid agency to analyze how that aid agency's institutions can produce incentives inimical to desired outcomes contrary to the desires of its own staff Second the authors use cases from India a country with low aid dependence and Zambia a country with high aid dependence to explore how institutions on the ground in recipient countries also mediate the effectiveness of aid Throughout the book the authors offer suggestions about how to improve aid's effectiveness These suggestions include how to structure evaluations in order to improve outcomes how to employ agency staff to gain from their on the ground experience and how to engage stakeholders as owners in the design resource mobilization learning and evaluation processes of development assistance programs

Institutions, Economic Performance and Sustainable Development Biman C. Prasad, Clement Allan Tisdell, 2006 Fiji has distinct institutional features that make it an ideal case for examining and discussing the consequences of institutional arrangements particularly the nature of property rights for national economic performance development prospects and the state of the environment which in turn reflects a nation's ability to achieve sustainable development Furthermore the nature of institutional arrangements in Fiji can be used to illustrate aspects of both the new and the old institutional economics Apart from the fact that Fiji provides considerable scope for the exploration of institutional economics and its applications Fiji is a comparatively important island nation in the south west Pacific that is an important member of the Pacific Island Forum grouping of 14 island nations The recent development of Fiji has been much influenced by its social history particularly by its institutional structures established or codified during British colonial rule Its present racial composition is largely a product of British colonisation of Indians brought to Fiji by the British to produce sugar cane as a contribution to the economic development of the former British Empire In many respects the type of global imperialism that was well established during the nineteenth century was a forerunner to modern economic globalisation which involves a mixture of free trading blocs and multilateralism The current population mixture of Fiji consisting of about equal numbers of Indian Fijians and Indigenous Fijians has its roots in Fiji's colonial history Furthermore the codified systems of property rights which largely excludes Indian Fijians from the ownership of land was established by the British It has been a major source of ethnic tension and of social and political conflict in Fiji

We show that this system of property rights has had important negative consequences for economic growth in Fiji for the economic performance of its industries and for the conservation of its natural resources natural resources which may not be equitable and which also does not appear to be efficient administratively This adds to social and political tension in Fiji

Collaboration for Sustainability and Innovation: A Role For Sustainability Driven by the Global South? Diego A. Vazquez-Brust,Joseph Sarkis,James J. Cordeiro,2013-11-20 A number of arguments are made by an international group of authors in this though provoking book about an understudied and socially important context A future in which financial wealth transfers across the North South divide from richer to poorer countries is far from sufficient for the relief of poverty and the pursuit of sustainability Caution must be taken when growth is achieved through the liquidation of the natural wealth of poorer nations in order to maintain a global economic status quo Neither poverty reduction nor sustainability will ultimately be achieved The financial collapse and social upheaval that might result will make the most recent economic downturn look trivial by comparison What is more urgently needed instead as argued in this book is collaboration for sustainability and innovation in the global South especially building on models originally developed in the South that are transferable to the North In pursuit of a sustainable and more equitable future the book examines such topics as Cross Border Innovation in South North Fair Trade Supply Chains Potential Pollution Prevention Programs in Bangladesh Digital Literacy and Social Inclusion in the South through Collective Storytelling and Eco innovation at the Bottom of the Pyramid Many of these stories and have not been told and need greater visibility The book contributes in a meaningfully to the discussion of how innovation and sustainability science can benefit both sides in South North innovation collaborations It provides useful introduction to the topics as well as valuable critiques and best practices This back and forth flow of ideas and innovation is itself new and promising in the modern pursuit of a fair and sustainable future for all regions of our planet

Socioeconomic Change and Land Use in Africa E. Mwangi,2016-04-30 This study investigates how and why a group ranch members in Kajiado District Kenya supported the subdivision of their collective landholdings into individual titled units and what outcomes resulted in this transition to individual rights Viewed over a longer time scale the author finds that politics is at the core of institutional change Technological Change and the Environment Arnulf Grübler, 2010-09-30 Much is written in the popular literature about the current pace of technological change But do we have enough scientific knowledge about the sources and management of innovation to properly inform policymaking in technology dependent domains such as energy and the environment While it is agreed that technological change does not fall from heaven like autumn leaves the theory data and models are deficient The specific mechanisms that govern the rate and direction of inventive activity the drivers and scope for incremental improvements that occur during technology diffusion and the spillover effects that cross fertilize technological innovations remain poorly understood In a work that will interest serious readers of history policy and economics the editors and their distinguished contributors offer a unique single volume overview of the theoretical and empirical work on technological change Beginning with a survey of existing research they provide analysis and case studies in contexts such as medicine agriculture and power generation paying particular attention to what technological change means for efficiency productivity and reduced environmental impacts The book includes a historical analysis of technological change an examination of the overall direction of technological change and general theories about the sources of change The contributors empirically test hypotheses of induced innovation and theories of institutional innovation They propose ways to model induced technological change and evaluate its impact and they consider issues such as uncertainty in technology returns technology crossover effects and clustering A copublication of Resources for the Future RFF and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis IIASA

The Handbook of Social Capital Dario Castiglione, Jan W. van Deth, Guglielmo Wolleb, 2008-04-17 Social capital is a relatively new concept in the social sciences In the last twenty or so years it has come to indicate that networks of social relationships represent a resource for both the individual and society since they provide support for the individual and facilitate collective action Although this is not an entirely new idea the more systematic way in which social capital captures such an intuition has created a new theoretical paradigm and helped to develop a series of innovative research programmes in politics economics and the study of human well being The concept has gained currency beyond academia extending its influence to political and policy making circles at local national and international levels It has also affected the way in which social surveys are conceived and public policies assessed As the idea of social capital has spread the literature about it has increased exponentially After twenty years of rapid expansion it is time for a more considered and critical assessment of how the original concept has been adapted and refined and how successful its application has been The Handbook of Social Capital intends to do precisely that It offers a state of the art view of discussions about the concept of social capital and the way in which it has been applied in empirical research The organization of the Handbook reflects this intention by focusing on conceptual development and analysis in the first part by identifying two main areas of research in which social capital has favoured the development of new and influential research programmes political participation in democratic societies and economic development and by exploring the more normative and policy oriented consequences of social capital All chapters comprising the volume were specifically written for the Handbook by some of the main experts in the fields The book provides authoritative and innovative introduction to the study of social capital
