Engendering Resistance: Agency and Power in Women's Prisons Mary Bosworth, 2017-03-02 This book explores how power is negotiated in women s prisons Drawing on fieldwork conducted in three penal establishments in England it analyses how women manage the restrictions of imprisonment and the manner in which they attempt to resist institutional control It is proposed that power is negotiated on a private individual level as women often resist the institution simply by trying to maintain an image of control over their own lives However their image of themselves as active reasoning agents is undermined by institutional regimes which encourage traditional passive feminine behaviour at the same time as they deny the women their identities and responsibilities as mothers wives girlfriends and sisters Femininity is therefore both the form and the goal of women s imprisonment Yet paradoxically femininity also offers the possibility of resistance because women manage to rebel by appropriating and changing aspects of it

Exploring Green Criminology Michael J. Lynch, Paul B. Stretesky, 2016-04-22 Few criminologists have drawn attention to the fact that widespread and significant forms of harm such as green or environmental crimes are neglected by criminology. Others have suggested that green crimes present the most important challenge to criminology as a discipline. This book argues that criminology needs to take green harms more seriously and to be revolutionized so that it forms part of the solution to the large environmental problems currently faced across the world. It asks how criminology should be redesigned to consider green environmental harm as a key area of study in an era where destruction of the earth and the world's ecosystem is a major concern and examines why this has remained unaccomplished so far. The chapters in this book apply an environmental frame of reference underlying a green approach to issues which can be addressed from within criminology and which can encourage criminologists and environmentalists to respond and react differently to environmental crime.

Creating Autoethnographies Tessa Muncey, 2010-04-14 The first ever practical text on this increasingly popular research method it provides a background and considers some of the criticisms of the approach. There are also a wide range of case studies drawn from a wide range of social science disciplines and exercises throughout the text.

City Limits Keith Hayward, 2016-07-18 City Limits contributes to a growing body of work under the umbrella of cultural criminology which attempts to bring an appreciation of cultural change to an understanding of crime in late modernity. Hayward and Young 2004. Hayward presents an ambitious theoretical analysis that attempts to inspire a cultural approach to understanding the crime city nexus and in particular to re-address strain and the concept of relative deprivation in the context of a culture of consumption. The book incorporates an impressive array of literature from beyond the boundaries of traditional criminology including urban studies, social theory and most strikingly from art and architectural criticism illustrating a multidisciplinary approach. This provides for a challenging and enlightening read with a particularly important emphasis on the impact of consumer culture on the lived urban experience and spatial dynamics of the city and in turn for an understanding of transgression and criminality. Runner up for the British Society of Criminology Book Prize 2004.
