The Book Class Louis Auchincloss, 1984-08-01 The author of Exit Lady Masham explores the lives of twelve members of a high society ladies book club in New York over the course of sixty years If I have a bias it is in my suspicion that women are intellectually and intuitively superior to men writes Christopher Gates the narrator of this book But he adds I certainly never thought they were nicer And I very much doubt that anyone could think so who was raised as I was in a society in which the female had so many more privileges than the male Thus he describes the twelve women who as debutantes instituted his mother's book class in 1908 and met every month for over sixty years to discuss a selected title old or new During their lifetimes these women did not have any real political or economic clout comparable to that of the men of their day Only Adeline Bloodgood had ever held a regular job and only Polly Travers as a State Assemblywoman ever played a formal role in politics For Georgia Bristed the hostess had largely consumed the woman and Leila Lee was a beauty in a day when simply being beautiful was considered an adequate occupation Although most of them were surrounded by a staff of servants and had no discernible responsibilities these women still lived with serious intent backed by a considerable and undeniable power that in no way derived from the snares and lures of womanly wiles Within the protected discipline of their surroundings their lives were filled with drama and challenge moments of passion of betrayal and loyalty of sweet revenge and joyless conquest of irony and illumination

Honorable Men Louis Auchincloss, 1985-09-25 From a New York Times bestselling author A novel about a member of the Greatest Generation wrestling with moral choices over the next generation's war in Vietnam Chip Benedict appeared to have the best of everything wealth education good looks charm and intelligence Shortly before entering law school he married Alida a pale beauty who also had the cunning and talent to become the debutante of the year escaping the progressively threadbare world of tarnished elegance and unpaid bills to which she was born Alida's life continued in a storybook fashion with her marriage to Chip a seemingly perfect and certainly honorable man Called to serve in World War II he returned a hero decorated for bravery at the Normandy landing Following in his father's footsteps he became chairman of the board of the prestigious Benedict Glass Company founded by his grandfather And yet with all of his gifts Chip is haunted by dark guilt that drives him to excel conform and embrace a righteousness that he fails to perceive as hypocrisy In business he becomes the perfect corporate executive lauded in Fortune and Forbes He serves his community supports the arts and patriotically honors his government But when it comes to choosing sides on the issue of Vietnam he will make a decision that casts aside the deepest ties and loyalties of his life Through a series of flashbacks the narrators come to realize how outside events have influenced their lives Auchincloss uses their story to show us the frailties of human nature when confronted with politics and morality
