perspective converting exclusion from the national discourse into the impetus for their creative endeavours Within this context Barrett suggests debates over who counts as Canadian the limits of tolerance and the breaking points of Canadian multiculturalism serve not as signs of multiculturalism's failure but as proof of both its vitality and of the unique challenges that black writing in Canada poses to multicultural politics and the nation itself

Morse,Phyllis A. Morse,2009-06-10 A classic work detailing an 11 000 year period of human culture within the largest river system of North America The earliest recorded description of the Central Mississippi Valley and its inhabitants is contained within the DeSoto chronicles written after the conquistadors passed through the area between 1539 and 1543 In 1882 a field agent for the Bureau of American Ethnology conducted the first systematic archaeological survey of the region an area that extends from near the mouth of the Ohio River to the mouth of the Arkansas River bounded on the east by the Mississippi River and on the west by the Ozark Highlands and Grand Prairie One hundred years later the authors produced this first comprehensive overview of all of the archaeological research conducted in the valley during the interim It is a well organized compendium written with both the professional archaeologist and the layperson in mind and is profusely illustrated with maps charts artifact photographs and drawings This volume was the first published history of the archaeology of the region and stands as the basic resource for that work today The Making and Unmaking of Colonial Cities Julia C. Obert,2023-09-15 The Making and Unmaking of Colonial Cities is a comparative study of architectural space in four post colonial capitals Belfast Northern Ireland Windhoek Namibia Bridgetown Barbados and Hanoi Vietnam Each chapter takes up one of these cities outlining its history of building and urban planning under colonial rule and linking that history to its contemporary shape and scope This genealogical information is drawn from primary source documents and archival materials The chapters then look to local literary texts to better understand the lingering impact of colonial building practices on individuals living in post colonial cities today These texts often foreground the difficulty of moving through a city that can never feel comfortably one s own legacies of racial segregation buildings that disregard indigenous resources and street names that serve as constant reminders of a history of oppression for example can produce feelings of anxiety even of unbelonging for native subjects However the literature also highlights ways in which the subversive wanderings of particular pedestrians taking shortcuts trespassing in forbidden places diverting spaces from their intended uses can contest official topography Bodies can therefore move against the power of a repressive regime at least to some degree even when that power is literally set in stone Obert argues for the significance of these small gestures of reclamation suggesting that we must counterpose the potential flexibility of lived space to the prohibitions of the map in order to more fully understand post colonial power relations
