Preventing Occupational Exposures:

NIOSH Alert National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (U.S.), 2004 Recent evidence in the Alert summarized on this poster documents that worker exposure to hazardous drugs is a persistent problem Although most air sampling studies have not demonstrated significant airborne concentrations of these drugs the sampling methods used in the past have come into question Larson et al 2003 and may not be a good indicator of contamination in the workplace In all studies involving examination of surface wipe samples researchers have determined that surface contamination of the workplace is common and widespread Also a number of recent studies have documented the excretion of several indicator drugs in the urine of health care workers Results from studies indicate that worker exposure to hazardous drugs in health care facilities may result in adverse health effects Appropriately designed studies have begun and are continuing to characterize the extent and nature of health hazards associated with these ongoing exposures NIOSH is currently conducting studies to further identify potential sources of exposure and methods to reduce or eliminate worker exposure to these drugs To minimize these potentially acute short term and chronic long term effects of exposure to hazardous drugs at work NIOSH recommends that at a minimum employers and health care workers follow the recommendations presented in this Alert

NOISTIC 2 Preventing Occupational Exposures to Infectious Disease in Health Care Amber Hogan Mitchell, 2020-09-22 This book is a practical guide for preventing occupational exposures to bloodborne and infectious disease in health care It is a timely and essential resource given that people working in healthcare settings sustain a higher incidence of occupational illness than any other industry sector and at the time of publication of this book we are in the midst of a global pandemic of COVID 19 While the guide is focused on health care primarily it would be useful for preventing exposures to essential workers in many other industries as well The guide offers easy to follow instruction all in one place for creating implementing and evaluating occupational health and safety programs Readers have practical information that they can use now to either build a new program or expand an existing one that protects workers from occupationally associated illness and infection With a focus on the public health significance of building better safer programs in health care the book provides not just the evidence based or data driven reasoning behind building successful programs but also includes sample programs plans checklists campaigns and record keeping and surveillance tools Topics explored among the chapters include Occupational Safety and Health Administration OSHA Regulatory Compliance Other Regulatory Requirements National Standards and Accreditation Performing a Hazard Assessment and Building an Exposure Control Plan Engineering Controls and Safer Medical Devices Personal Protective Equipment Placement and Use Facing a Modern Pandemic Preventing Occupational Exposures to Infectious Disease in Health Care is a comprehensive resource for both seasoned and novice professionals with primary secondary or ancillary responsibility for occupational or employee health and safety infection prevention risk management or environmental health and safety in a variety of healthcare or patient care settings It also would appeal to those working in public health nursing medical or clinical technical trades with an interest in infection prevention and control and or occupational health and infectious disease Preventing Occupational Exposure to Antineoplastic and Other Hazardous Drugs in Health Care Settings G. Edward Burroughs, Thomas H. Connor, Kenneth R. Mead, Laurence D. Reed, National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, 2004 Recent evidence in the Alert summarized on this poster documents that worker exposure to hazardous drugs is a persistent problem Although most air sampling studies have not demonstrated significant airborne concentrations of these drugs the sampling methods used in the past have come into question Larson et al 2003 and may not be a good indicator of contamination in the workplace In all studies involving examination of surface wipe samples researchers have determined that surface contamination of the workplace is common and widespread Also a number of recent studies have documented the excretion of several indicator drugs in the urine of health care workers Results from studies indicate that worker exposure to hazardous drugs in health care facilities may result in adverse health effects Appropriately designed studies have begun and are continuing to characterize the extent and nature of health hazards associated with these ongoing exposures NIOSH is currently conducting studies to further identify potential sources of exposure and methods to reduce or eliminate worker exposure to these drugs To minimize these potentially acute short term and chronic long term effects of exposure to hazardous drugs at work NIOSH recommends that at a minimum employers and health care workers follow the recommendations presented in this Alert NIOSHTIC 2 Preventing Occupational Exposures to Bloodborne Pathogens Janine Jagger, Jane L. Perry, 2004 Preventing Occupational Exposures to Antineoplastic and Other Hazardous Drugs in Health Care Settings, 2004 Preventing Occupational Exposures to Antineoplastic and Other Hazardous Drugs I National Institute Safety and Health, 2015-03-13 The adverse health effects associated with antineoplastic agents cancer chemotherapy drugs cytotoxic drugs in cancer patients and some non cancer patients treated with these drugs are well documented The very nature of antineoplastic agents make them harmful to healthy cells and tissues as well as the cancerous cells For cancer patients with a life threatening disease there is certainly a great benefit to treatment with these agents However for the health care workers who are exposed to antineoplastic agents as part of their work practice precautions should be taken to eliminate or reduce exposure as much as possible Pharmacists who prepare these drugs or nurses who may prepare and or administer them are the two occupational groups who have the highest potential exposure to antineoplastic agents Additionally physicians and operating room personnel may also be exposed through the treatment of patients Hospital staff such as shipping and receiving personnel custodial workers laundry workers and waste handlers all have potential exposure to these drugs during the course of their work The increased use of antineoplastic agents in veterinary oncology also puts these workers at risk for exposure to these drugs Preventing Occupational Exposures, 1991 Preventing Occupational Hearing Loss John Robert Franks, 1996 Preventing

Occupational Exposure to Antineoplastic and Other Hazardous Drugs in Health Care Settings ,2004 The purpose of this Alert is to increase awareness among health careworkers and their employers about the health risks posed by working with hazardous drugs and to provide them with measures for protecting their health Infection Control in the Dental Office Louis G. DePaola,Leslie E. Grant,2019-11-17 This book reviews the principles of infection control and the guidelines and standards of care in multiple countries discussing them within the context of the practice of dentistry The aim is to enable dental practitioners to ensure that the appropriate measures are adopted for each patient contact thereby minimizing the risk of transmission of infection a goal that is becoming ever more important given the threats posed by new or re emerging infectious diseases and drug resistant infections Readers will find information and guidance on all aspects of infection control within the dental office hand and respiratory hygiene use of personal protective equipment safe handling of sharps and safe injection practices management of occupational exposures maintenance of dental unit water quality surface disinfection and the cleaning and sterilization of dental instruments Infection Control in the Dental Office will be an invaluable asset for all dental practitioners including dentists dental specialists dental hygienists and dental assistants
