China's control over critical minerals for lithium battery production, impacts the EV industry. To avoid reliance on the scarce and challenging-to-extract minerals of nickel and copper, automakers are turning to LFP batteries, made with lithium, iron, and phosphate (LiFePo₄). However, China also holds control over the importation of the critical minerals necessary for LFP batteries.

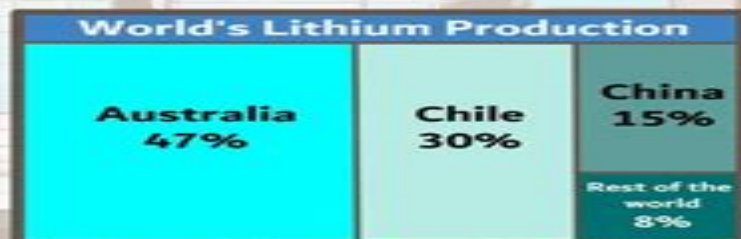

China heavily relies on imports for its mineral needs, including 71% of the world's iron, primarily sourced from Australia and Brazil. It also imports 69% of the world's lithium, with major suppliers being Australia and Chile. However, in contrast, China possesses abundant phosphate resources and actually exports 28% of the global phosphate share.^{[1][2][3][4]}

China's control over the EV battery industry, including LFP batteries, is set to continue. Lithium, the scarcest of the three LiFePo₄ minerals, is the key for catching up to China. Australia, accounting for 47% of the world's lithium production exports the majority of it to China due to the presence of numerous lithium refining plants. Recently, Australia has invested in domestic lithium refining, opening the doors to free trade agreements with the U.S.^[5]

Philip Hsu, Yu-Shan Wu, Suisheng Zhao, 2012-05-23 This book examines the development model that has driven China's economic success and looks at how it differs from the Washington Consensus China's Development Model CDM is examined with a view to answering a central question given China's peculiar matrix of a socialist party state juxtaposed with economic internationalization and marketization what are the underlying dynamics and the distinctive features of the economic and political legal social dimensions of the CDM and how do we properly characterize their interrelations The chapters further analyse to what extent and under what circumstances is China's development model sustainable and to what degree is it readily applicable to other developing countries Based on their findings in this volume the authors conclude that the defining feature of the CDM's economic dimension is Janus faced state led growth and the political legal social dimension of the CDM is best characterized as adaptive post totalitarianism The contributors illustrate that the CDM's parameters are shown to be much less sustainable than the CDM's outcome in developmental performance and the extent to which the CDM can be applied to other late developers is subject to more qualifications than its sustainability

Poland China Journal ,1928 In Search of Green China Ma Tianjie,2025-02-13 The world cannot address its pressing environmental problems without China. But can China be relied upon as a steadfast steward of nature as its leaders have claimed in recent years. Prominent environmental campaigner and reporter Ma Tianjie gets to the heart of China's remarkable ecological transformation to answer this question. He takes us on a journey through the country's thirty year struggle to clean up its rivers, clear its air and stabilize carbon emissions, drawing out the complex political impulses that have helped and hindered progress. Anchoring his storytelling in some of China's major environmental challenges from Beijing's airpocalypse to the cancer villages of the Huai River basin, he shows how the ideas and actions of few extraordinary individuals were critical in changing China from a heavily polluted country to a place where environmental issues are high on the agenda. The complex ecological tapestry Ma paints illuminates the key ideas, experiences and influences that have shaped China's environmental consciousness and will continue to frame the search for green China well into the twenty first century.
