Teaching English: 11-14 Helena Ceranic,2011-06-30 British 'Spy Fever' in the First World War Harry Richards,2025-08-21 An exploration of how British society experienced spy fever during the First World War Following the declaration of war in 1914 German spies were sighted across Britain as a potent form of spy fever supposedly gripped the nation This book questions the extent to which British society was truly terrified of German spies and explores the broader impacts of secret warfare during the early stages of the First World War Harry Richards analyses the belief that a clandestine network of spies and saboteurs mostly comprised of naturalised aliens domiciled in Britain had successfully infiltrated all elements of society and were poised to destroy Britain s war effort from within Although that danger never fully materialised the spy peril remained a dominant feature of radical politics and popular culture throughout the First World War. Why images of German spies were so appealing and enduring during this period is the subject of this book. British Spy Fever in the First World War contends that our understanding of spy fever is in need of significant revision. Whereas previous studies typically characterise society's reaction to the spy peril as one of hysteria, this book shows that our understanding of spy fever should encompass a wider variety of emotions and experiences. British society was certainly obsessed with images of German espionage but this seldom resulted in psychological disorder. Each chapter therefore examines different emotional experiences: alarm, terror, excitement, anxiety, hope, anger and enjoyment to highlight the diverse and complex reactions towards the enemy within.

Post-colonial Curriculum Practices in South Asia Asantha Attanayake, 2019-07-10. Post colonial Curriculum Practices in South Asia gives a conceptual framework for curriculum design for English Language Teaching taking into account context specific features in the teaching learning settings of post colonial South Asia. It reveals how the attitudes prevalent in post colonial South Asian societies towards English negatively influence English language learning. The book provides a comprehensive analysis to design a course for English language teaching that aims at building learner confidence to speak English. Based on original research, the study covers Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. The book focuses on the context specific nature of learners and considers a curriculum design that binds teaching materials and teaching methods together with an aligned assessment. Chapters discuss language attitudes, learner characteristics and English in the context of native languages and introduce a special type of anxiety that stems from existing language attitudes in a society referred to as Language Attitude Anxiety. The book will appeal to doctoral and post doctoral scholars in English language education, students and researchers of sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics as well as curriculum designers of ELT and language policy makers.
