

The Lymphatic System

Lymph and lymph vessels

Lymph is a clear, colorless fluid that circulates through the lymphatic system. It is composed of white blood cells, antibodies, and other substances that help fight infection and disease. Lymph vessels are thin, clear tubes that carry lymph throughout the body. They are found in almost all parts of the body, including the skin, muscles, and organs.

Lymph nodes

Lymph nodes are small, bean-shaped organs that are part of the lymphatic system. They are found throughout the body, often in clusters. Lymph nodes filter lymph and remove any harmful substances, such as bacteria and viruses, that may be present. They also produce and store white blood cells that help fight infection.

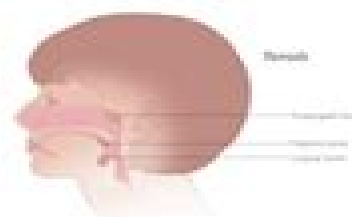

Inflammatory and immune responses

The lymphatic system plays a key role in the body's inflammatory and immune responses. When an infection or injury occurs, the lymphatic system helps to remove the harmful substances and transport them to the lymph nodes. In the lymph nodes, white blood cells are activated and multiply to fight the infection. The lymphatic system also helps to regulate the immune response, ensuring that it is not overactive and does not cause damage to the body's tissues.

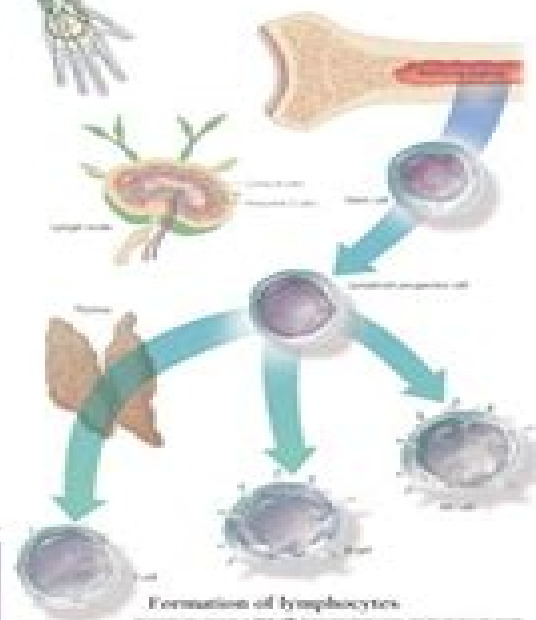

What is the lymphatic system?

The lymphatic system is a network of organs and vessels that help the body fight infection and disease. It is composed of lymph nodes, lymph vessels, and lymphoid organs. The lymphatic system is responsible for filtering lymph and removing any harmful substances, such as bacteria and viruses, that may be present. It also produces and stores white blood cells that help fight infection.

Lymphoid intestinal tissue

Lymphoid intestinal tissue is a type of lymphoid tissue found in the lining of the small intestine. It is composed of lymph nodes and lymphoid follicles. This tissue helps to filter lymph and remove any harmful substances, such as bacteria and viruses, that may be present in the intestinal fluid.

Formation of lymphocytes

Lymphocytes are a type of white blood cell that are responsible for fighting infection and disease. They are formed in the bone marrow and circulate through the lymphatic system. Lymphocytes are able to recognize and destroy any harmful substances, such as bacteria and viruses, that may be present in the body.
